—GOVERNOR McCALL'S FAREWELL TO THE MASSACHUSETTS GUARDSMEN.

BAY STATE MILITIA GOES TO EL PASO

Camp Whitney, Framingham, June 26.—Bay State troops started for El Paso on the Mexican border this afternoon. The first of the units to entrain is now on its way to the front, and nearly 5,000 will be on the way when the last train has pulled out.

The departures are taking place in this order: First, the Ninght; then the Fifth; third, the Eighth, and fourth, the Second Regiment. After the first trains pulled out of Framingham, others made ready to leave on the long journey southward.

The departures came amid scenes unsurpassed since 1898. There was a tremendous outpouring of people, of tears of joy and of sorrrow, of cheers and hastily uttered farewells, mother's last words to her son and the wife's last kiss of her husband, off for the front.

It was a scene never to be forgotten. In a few minutes the first scene was being repeated. Again a wave of intermingled joy and sorrow, and an undercurrent of great patriotic fervor. Tears fell from maternal eyes that tried to smile bravely through the mist; a wife's lips spoke the words of cheer while the heart felt heavy.

More hastily said goodbys, and then the waving of handkerchiefs, heads of militiamen sticking from the windows, all eager, all happy, all addressing loved ones standing here or there in the crowd.

CARRANZA MUST QUIT OR FIGHT

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 26.—President Wilson will place the entire Mexican situation before Congress at a special joint session to be held on Wednesday at noon unless, in the meantime, General Carranza meets the views of the United States.

Whether the President at that time will ask for a flat declaration of war on the de facto government of Mexico or will suggest passage of a resolution such as was adopted at the time of the Vera Cruz incident, permitting him to utilize the armed forces of the government to enforce the decrees of the State Department, has not yet been decided.

The legal authorities of the State Department today are considering this question. Congress would fol-

Today's News in Mexican Crisis

1—First movement of Massachusetts troops to the border begins today. The militia breaks camp at Framingham and at once starts entraining for the front. The Bay State units will mass at El Paso the main striking point of the United States if the army advances into Mexico.

2—Carranza's admission of responsibility for the Carrizal attack. The Mexican government makes official avowal that it had ordered its military commanders to obstruct the passage of the American punitive expedition and that it is responsible for the attack on the Tenth Cavalry troops.

3—Accumulative evidence that the troops of the Tenth Cavalry were treacherously attacked and slain at Carrizal. The statement of Captain Morey, at first thought killed but now officially reported alive by General Pershing, is that the Mexicans invited the Americans to a conference and then attacked the Americans, opening fire first. Further corroboration came in the making public of a carbon copy of a note sent by Captain Boyd to the Mayor of Carrizal. Boyd informed the Mexican official the Americans were on a peaceful mission and wished to pass through the town. In addition, a note signed by General Felix Gomez was found, inviting Boyd to a conference. These facts prove beyond all doubt that the troopers were the victims of treachery.

GOVERNOR WATCHES DEPARTURE.

That the Bay State troops might be among the first called into action was indicated by the definite announcement that the units will mass at El Paso, on the immediate frontier.

This would put the Bay State soldiers at the main striking point of the United States army.

It was shortly before noon that Brigadier-General E. Leroy Sweetser told the newspaper men that the trains were made up and in readiness for the units. He added:

"The Ninth and Fifth Regiments will start right after the noon mess. The boys must have something to eat first.

"The Ninth will go by way of the Boston & Albany and the Eighth and Second will go over the New Haven."

The units will go by rail all the way to El Paso.

Adjutant-General Cole stated at noon that every member of the First Squadron of Cavalry had taken the Federal oath. Yesterday about 30 per cent. of

WOMAN SUICIDE BY HANGING IN WOODS

Attleboro, June 26.—Mary E. Ryan, daughter of Martin Ryan of Somerset, committed suicide early today by hanging herself in the woods back of a sanitarium in this city, where she had been a patient. Temporary insanity induced by despondency was responsible for the act, in the opinion of the medical examiner. The body was found hanging from a limb of a tree.

Artillery Corps at Framingham

Officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, of the Coast Artillery Corps, were mobilized in the various corps centres today and were later sent to Framingham. At Camp Whitney the officers are expected to look after the training of the recruits.

As happened a week ago when the mobilization call came to the militia, the police aided in notifying the men. The Coast Artillery officers hastened to armories in city or town, and in a short time were speeding to Camp Whitney.

25 TRAINS TO TAKE TROOPS

the enlisted men of A and B troops refused to take the oath. This morning, however, they all marched up and were sworn in.

The Adjutant-General also stated that the only unit not ready to entrain was the Second Battalion, Field Artillery.

The official orders from the Department of the East were for the entrainment of the troops by 3 o'clock this afternoon.

This set the entire camp in a final whirl of activity for the entraining and departure southward to the call of duty.

The Ninth was the first to start breaking tents. The first unit packed was the hospital corps.

It was a wonderful sight—thousands of men, each one busy in a definite line of work—and then the disappearance of Framingham's tented city—disappearing as silently and as swiftly as the poetic Arab that folds his tent and silently steals away. Then began the march to the waiting trains.

25 TRAINS NEEDED.

The expectation was that twenty-five trains at least would be used in transporting the units, which included four regiments of infantry, one regiment of field artillery (less one battalion), a squadron of cavalry, and the hospital and signal corps.

Word was given out at the camp that the machine gun companies will carry 15,200 rounds of ammunition; and that each trooper will carry twenty rounds of pistol ammunition (.45 calibre).

The field artillery going to the border comprises Battery A of Boston, Battery B of Worcester and Battery C of Lawrence.

The entraining will leave between 2,000 and 3,000 men, mostly recruits, in Camp Whitney. The Coast Artillery Corps officers, mobilized today, will assist in training the "rookies."

It was estimated that upwards of 500 coaches and cars were utilized by the railroads for the entrainment. This big drain upon the railroad companies' equipment hit the suburban steam service, most of the trains being run with fewer coaches than usual.

GOVERNOR WATCHES TROOPS.

Governor McCall went to Framingham to watch the entraining of the troops.

Every unit was full of enthusiasm for the long journey to the border. To a man they were eager for whatever the future has in store.

The only unhappy aggregation was the Second Battalion of the field artillery, but they were heartened by the knowledge that they will in all likelihood be on the way shortly.

The musterin-in kept up continuously for thirty-six hours. Practically none was rejected. At dawn the task was virtually ended, except for some detail which will be finished en route to El Paso.

Later came the sentimental touch in the arrival of throngs of mothers and sisters and wives and sweethearts —and male relatives—of the soldiers. Necessarily in the rush of breaking camp, last words were few; but the field once emptied and the men well on their way down the Framingham streets, the opportunity neared for the last fond embraces and kisses.

There were tears of joy and tears of sorrowful parting; and then the final farewells.

A hundred autos brought relatives of the Waltham militiamen, and other autos brought a host of relations of other companies.

The Bay State militiamen started preparations bright and early for the evacuation of the camp. The work of examining the men relative to their physical fitness was carried on all night. The men were put through a rigorous examination by Major J. Frank Hall and his corps.

The doctors worked incessantly until dawn. They were aided in their work by the searchlights of many autos as they were directed on each man as he was put through the tests.

BUSY ALL NIGHT.

Throughout the night while the muster field was the scene of much activity, things were doing down in the railroad yards of Framingham. All freight cars were sent along the route, all sidings were cleared and the work of getting the special trains and placing them in their different positions where the troops might reach them easily.

Throughout the night messengers darted here and there with personal and official messages. Brigadier-General Sweetser took a few winks of sleep, but was the first man on the job this morning.

He stated that everything would be in readiness at the appointed time, and that he was now awaiting the final word as to destination.

The telegraph tent was deluged all night with soldiers who desired to send farewell or official messages. All of the operators were called from their lodging places and set to work at the key.

Some dozen telephone operators who had been transferred here for the work as assistants during the week likewise were called from their comfortable quarters at the downtown hotel and put to work at the board.

Some of the "rookies" who are to be left behind for further training will go to the Wakefield rifle range, where they will be instructed in the use and care of rifles, also do a bit of shooting.

The men will be transported in sixteen automobiles loaned by the Ancients.

It was learned that 500 horses which the quartermaster's department ordered lost night from the base at Watertown, were absolutely green, many of them half wild.

It was the final word as far as horses go and now it will be a matter of the government supplying the troops when they get down South.

Volunteers continue to pour in. As each batch arrives a cheer goes up from the regulars. The bands have kept things lively with appropriate music.

The infantry trains were backed into the mile-long siding of the Sherborn reformatory. To each infantry train there was a box car for equipment, a box car for wagons, a box car for forage, four day coaches, four Pullman coaches, two baggage cars with kitchens, then five more day coaches and one sleeper. Each battalion was assigned a train to itself—or three trains to a regiment.

The cavalry and artillery were assigned loading platforms at the Framingham freight sheds. No delays were anticipated by the railroad officials, who held wide open the right of way for the troop trains.

The preliminary arrangements and provisional routing were arranged by Major Knowles, Sergeant Hebblethwaite, Quartermaster's Department; Superintendent of Transportation I. O. Halliday, New Haven; E. S. Wilson, assistant general passenger agent of the New Haven; L. de B. Lovett, resident engineer of the New Haven in charge of entraining at Framingham; General Superintendent C. N. Woodward of the New Haven and Trainmaster D. S. Brigham and Superintendent J. B. Hammill of the Boston & Albany.

The last Sunday in camp was a memorable day, marked by many important developments. One of the most important features was the wholesale withdrawal of militiamen, especially musicians of the regimental bands, who refused to take the federal oath of allegiance because they feared the six years' service clause which involved foreign duty. Sixty members of the crack First Cavalry refused to take the oath.

SKETCH SHOWING POSITION OF MILITIA AT FRAMINGHAM CAMP BEFORE ENTRAINING FOR BORDER

Wordon Wood, the celebrated military and marine artist, who is a sergeant in the Fifth Massachusetts Regiment, depicts Camp Whitney as it looked after the militia was called to the colors. In his sketch, Mr. Wood shows the position of the different regiments, machine gun company, cavalry, mounted orderlies, ambulance corps, General Sweetser's headquarters and press camp before start for the border.

TROOPERS WHO BALKED TAKE THE OATH

Scores of Massachusetts militiamen who refused Sunday to take the oath as members of the federal troops marched up to the mustering officer at Camp Whitney, Framingham, today and were sworn in.

These included all of the cavalrymen and infantrymen who had refused. The only ones remaining were a number of bandsmen. It is thought that several of the bands will be forced to enlist musicians from outside or the bands will not be able to have enough men to make music.

Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole announced today that every member of the First Squadron of Cavalry had taken the oath as National Guardsmen. Sunday about 10 per cent. of the enlisted men of A and B Troops refused to take the oath, for it carries with it three years in reserve, after the three-year enlistment is up, as is the case in the regular service. This morning, however, all of the cavalrymen who had refused to sign up, marched up and were sworn in as National Guardsmen.

General Cole said he believed that the unwillingness of some of the men to take the oath was due to a misunderstanding on their part as to its exact meaning and not because of cowardice or any unwillingness to go to the front.

"Before the day is over practically every man in the State militia will have taken the oath which some of the men did not do yesterday," he said.

"Their refusal to take the oath was not prompted by cowardice, in my judgment, but because they expected they had a right to know definitely what they were signing.

"If any man declines to serve he can be discharged. The captain of his company may make application to the Governor for his discharge.

"The men saw six years' service staring them in the face and they wanted to find out what it was all about. Some of them, for example, have only six months of their regular term in the militia to serve and doubtless wanted to know what they were up against."

General Cole explained that members of the militia would be required to complete their unexpired term, to comprise the three years' enlistment. Thus a man who has served two years would complete his original enlistment term with the expiration of another year.

Connecticut Troops Get Marching Orders

By International News Service.

Camp Holcombe, Niantic, Ct., June 26.—Orders for the Connecticut militia to start moving towards the border on Monday night, were received just before midnight by General Cole from Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the Eastern Department, United States Army. The First Infantry, Second Infantry, First Hospital Company, First Ambulance Company, B Troop, Fifth Cavalry, and A Troop, Tenth Cavalry, are included in the orders.

Ten Per Cent. Refuse to Enlist in Vermont

Burlington, Vt., June 26.—Vermont's quota of the National Guard, mobilized at Camp Governor Gates, was sworn into the Federal service today. The oath of allegiance was subscribed to by 90 per cent. of the troops, numbering approximately fifty officers and 1,130 privates.

SITUATION IS ACUTE, SAYS SENATOR STONE

Washington, June 26.

FOLLOWING a conference with President Wilson, Senator Stone of Missouri said:

"The President will appear before Congress very soon.

"The situation is very acute. There can be no settlement of the Mexican trouble until the United States settles it.

"I am convinced that Carranza is trying to force the issue."

Asked what the United States will do to secure the release of the American cavalrymen taken prisoners by Carranza, Senator Stone said:

"If Carranza refuses to deliver the prisoners we will have to go after them."

Mediation was not discussed at the conference, Senator Stone said. The matter was not suggested either by the President or by his Congressional conferees. Senator Stone declared he did not think the issues between the United States and Carranza were susceptible of mediation.

GOVERNOR BIDS 'GODSPEED' TO TROOPS

Camp Whitney, Framingham, June 26.—The official farewell and Godspeed of the State of Massachusetts was spoken to the Bay State soldiers just before they embarked for the Mexican frontier, by Governor McCall here this afternoon.

In a speech ringing with patriotism, Governor McCall said to them: "Whatever may come I feel sure that you will acquit yourselves like men and show yourselves fit comrades with the brave men of the Massachusetts of other days.

"A shot fired at an American soldier wherever he of right is in the performance of his duty, is a shot fired at the American home," he declared.

"KEEP FLAG UNSULLIED."

Governor McCall asked them to perform with valour in the country's cause, but to be guilty of no act of inhumanity that would "sully the honor of your flag."

Governor McCall came to Camp Whitney to speak the State's farewell, accompanied by Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole and Councillors Wright, Smith, Buckley, Mulligan and Waggatt.

The Councillors will be in readiness to go into session at once if it seems necessary to use, for any cause, any part of the $100,000 emergency fund that is appropriated annually by the Legislature to be used at the discretion of the Council.

Governor McCall said in his farewell speech to the Bay State soldiers:

"A solemn occasion exists which in the opinion of the President of the United States requires you at once to leave your homes and go forth to serve your country.

"Your mobilization has been accomplished with all the speed possible under the circumstances. More time might have been spent to perfect your condition, but the call of the head of the Nation is the supreme call and it finds you ready to respond.

"It is a serious moment when you take yourself from your firesides, your kindred and your friends to repair to service which may be full of hardship and of danger. But what ever may come to you I feel sure that you will acquit yourselves like men and show yourselves fit comrades with the brave men of Massachusetts of other days.

"NATION BEHIND YOU."

"Not merely the Commonwealth, but the whole country will stand behind you. A shot fired at an American soldier wherever he of right is in the performance of his duty, is a shot fired at the American home.

"While you will be ready to dare greatly, we may be sure that there will be no act of inhumanity on your part to tarnish the most brilliant victory or sully the honor of your flag.

"Your prompt response puts a duty upon every one in the Commonwealth to care for those who are dependent upon you and upon those who will be quick to follow you if the call shall come.

"Remember that you are the soldiers of a great and civilized nation; that you are the citizens of a Commonwealth with a proud history. Show yourselves worthy of both.

"On behalf of all the people of the Commonwealth I bid you farewell and Godspeed."

UNITED STATES AGAIN DEFIED IN CARRANZA REPLY TO WILSON

CAPITAL WAITS FOR ANSWER

By WALLACE E. SMITH.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

El Paso, Texas, June 26.—Don Venustiano Carranza, with the treachery at Carrizal marked against him and President Wilson's latest note in his hands still defies the United States.

His reply to the note of President Wilson as forecasted by an inspired Mexican statement in Juarez today will be no less defiant than the conduct of his subordinates who made good their words at Carrizal.

Carranza's attitude is outlined in the Mexican newspaper El Paso Du Norte, the official mouthpiece of the de facto government in Juarez.

In this connection it became known that another great body of Mexican troops had been sent from Chihuahua in the direction of Villa Ahumada. Some of these troops will later head for the hills back of Juarez. There the garrison which evacuated the Mexican town is said to be intrenching against threatened invasion from the American side.

WILL RESIST ADVANCE.

General Trevino, Carranza commander at Chihuahua, says a dispatch from that town, has received word that 5,000 American troops with a supply train and field guns, have started for a point below Villa Ahumada and has announced his intention of resisting this column's advance. The dispatch quotes Trevino as saying:

"We will do what we did at Carrizal. We showed them at Carrizal that we meant what we said, and they must learn that we are not to be trifled with. I have ordered my generals to fire on any body of American troops that approach."

The American prisoners captured at Carrizal and whose release the American government has demanded are in the custody of General Trevino.

The forecast of General Carranza's reply to the United States is given in El Paso del Norte as follows:

General Carranza will confine himself to a discussion of American troops on Mexican soil. He will state that it is impossible for the de facto government to conduct warfare against the bandits while the American troops are camped in Chihuahua.

If President Wilson sincerely desires peace he will order General Pershing's expedition to quit Mexico. General Carranza will ignore the issues which have been raised, including the issues of sovereignty. He will devote himself to arguments against the presence of American troops on Mexican soil.

Mexican interventionists and revolutionaries are finding opportunity to equip and send out parties of bandits to finish the work begun at Columbus and Glen Springs.

THIS WAR IS NEAR.

One of the highest military authorities in the El Paso district said today that war and a speedy American invasion are absolutely sure as a result of the President's latest note.

"This calls for a show down," he said. "Each day the Mexicans have been more insolent. Each day they are convincing themselves that they can make a decisive stand against our troops. They are all full of a sort of confidence. Carranza cannot retract from the position he has been forced in. Whatever his present desires, it must be remembered that he is being pressed by powerful Mexicans who surround him. I feel certain that we will be in Juarez in less than a week and soon after that begin a march toward Chihuahua."

The first militia outfits are still being awaited by the army to take patrol positions that will enable the regulars to "go in." The big "four point sevens," the guns under which the Juarez garrison suddenly decided to take a more advantageous position with a large chain of mountains in front of them, are in position and ready to open fire across El Paso and into the Mexican town.

BELIEVE DIE IS CAST.

Carranza, it is considered by observers here, would have extreme difficulty in complying with President Wilson's demands even if he were so inclined. Minister of War Obregon clearly defined the de facto governments position the day after the Carrizal battle when he stated that the Mexican attack was made on his order. In this he has been preceded by General Trevino at Chihuahua. These statements put the de facto government on record.

To evade them Carranza would have to refute Obregon and Trevino. There can be small doubt that this would result in a counter refutation by Obregon and Trevino. Both commanders is believed would quit Carranza and lead their forces against the American troops at once.

It is known that Obregon is the man in Mexico feared by Carranza. It was Obregon by his surprising military showing against Pancho Villa, who put Carranza at the head of the government. In command of the entire Mexican army, as he now is, he is the man who can take Carranza's power away from him and Obregon is ambitious.

Trevino, though under Obregon's orders, is in command of the entire Chihuahua army and directly in the field. Once these two decide that there will be war no orders of Carranza can stop them. Both of them have an immense personal following in the army.

The soldiers who are cool toward Carranza and the "two peso a day" system which gives them a trifle less than four cents to support themselves are loyal to the commanders who have been in the field with them.

GRAPHIC DRAWING OF WOMEN BEATING PRISONERS OF THE TENTH CAVALRY ON ARRIVAL AT CHIHUAHUA

The brutal treatment by Mexican men and women of the seventeen captive United States troopers in Chihuahua City is here graphically depicted by Haydon Jones, the Boston artist, whose drawing is based on accurate personal observations in Mexico and his intimate knowledge of the Mexican character. The story of the treatment accorded the American troops trapped by Carranzistas has stirred the nation deeply, and it has taken the pen of Artist Jones to portray in vivid manner the scenes of several days ago in the Mexican city. No artist in the country knows the Mexican mind better than Haydon Jones, and probably none other as well as he. He has spent much time in Mexico, and being a close observer, took every advantage of his opportunities for sizing up and passing judgment upon the peculiar twists of the native temperament. But he has also seen people of the same type excited in wartime, and has himself been in their hands as a prisoner. During the Spanish-American war Mr. Jones was captured in Cuba, was cast into prison and later doomed to death by the military authorities. That he lives today to depict the deeds of the Mexicans of Chihuahua City is due to the fortune that came his way in an exchange of prisoners. He was one of the prisoners exchanged. How the Mexican inhabitants grossly maltreated and even brutally assaulted, the defenceless troopers is told by uncensored dispatches from Chihuahua City. The prisoners were stripped of part of their uniforms. Their arms were bound with ropes, and bare of head and feet, they were forced to march through the streets, facing the unreasoning anger of the mob. Women jeered and hooted, and later joined in the stoning of the troopers. Sticks were also thrown; there were shouts of "Kill the Gringoes," and women clubbed the men, the brawny Amazons beating the helpless prisoners across their backs. It is a story of mingled cruelty and shame, and Artist Jones has depicted it in graphic manner.

Field Headquarters, via Radio to Columbus, N. M., June 26.—Captain Lewis H. Morey, wounded in the Carrizal fight, is safe, after his daring stand against the Mexicans and heroic sacrifice to save his men.

This report came in here to General Pershing from Major Jenkins' column of the Eleventh Cavalry, which is scouring the desert for survivors.

Nine more of the little group who faced the withering machine gun fire of the Mexicans probably must be added to the list of American dead, according to the report. No trace of these men could be found.

At dawn the next day they started out on foot in a futile attempt to regain the remainder of the American detachment. Sam Morey became weak, however, from a severe wound he had received. He was unable to walk.

He fell to the sands and believed himself dying. It was then that he wrote his report and giving it to the soldiers with him, ordered them to leave him and if possible save their own lives and deliver his account of the battle to General Pershing.

After the soldiers had departed Morey in some unaccountable manner managed to rally strength enough to reach the ranch house of an American, named McCabe. This house is about nine miles from Carrizal. It was here that Major Jenkins found him.

A note that was found on Captain Boyd's body showed that he was invited into the town for a conference by General Gomez, but declined the invitation, and that afterwards he met the Mexican commander outside the town.

In addition to Boyd's own note, a copy of a note signed by General Felix Gomez and inviting Captain Boyd into Carrizal for a conference was found. This proved beyond all doubt that the American troops were victims of treachery.

Following is General Pershing's report to General Funston with the text of Captain Morey's letter:

Colonia Dublan, Mexico, June 26.—Following message written by Captain Morey shortly after the Carrizal battle found in hands of three men of Troop K returning from Carrizal, and sent to Ojo Frederico by Lieutenant Meyers:

To commanding officer Ojo Frederico:

Carrizal, Mex., June 21.

My troops reached Ojo Santo Domingo at 4.30 p. m., June 20. Met Troop C under Captain Boyd. I came under Captain Boyd's command and marched my troops in rear for Carrizal at 4:15 a. m. Reached open field to southeast of town at 6:30 a. m. Captain Boyd sent in a note requesting permission to pass through town. This was refused, Stated we would go to the north but not east.

Captain Boyd said he was going to Ahmuda this time. He was talking with the Carranza commander. Gomez sent a written message that Captain Boyd could bring his force into town and have a conference. Captain Boyd feared ambush. He was under the impression that the Mexicans would run as soon as we fired.

We formed for attack, his intention being to move up to the line of about 120 Mexicans on the edge of the town. We formed C troop on the left in line of skirmishers, one platoon of K troop on right of line and another K troop platoon, on extreme right and a little to the rear.

When we were within 300 yards the Mexicans opened fire and a strong one before we fired a shot. Then we opened up.

They did not run, but, to make a long account short, after about an hour's fire both troops had advanced C troop in position of Mexican gun and K troop closing in tightly to the left.

We were very busy on the right keeping off a flank attack. A group of Mexicans left town, went around our rear and led horses to the left at a gallop.

At about 5 o'clock one platoon of troop K, which was on our right, fell back. Sergeant said he could not stay there. Both platoons fell back about one thousand yards to the west and then, together with some men of troop C, who were there, the men scattered.

I was slightly wounded. Captain Boyd, a man cold one, was killed. Nothing was seen of Lieutenant Adair after the fight started, the men I saw stated.

"I am hiding in a hole 2,000 yards from the field and have one other wounded man and three men with me.

MOREY.

The three men referred to by Captain Morey are the three men who had the above message in their possession. The wounded man was from Troop C, shot through the knee.

Lieutenant Meyers reports that the three men were rather vague as to where they had left Captain Morey, but stated that on the night of the twenty-first they had carried him two miles, that Morey became weak, could go no further and told them to leave him. The men thought he was dying from loss of blood and lack of water.

Meyers reconnoitered twenty miles east of Santa Maria but found nothing. Out of grain and forage for horses, he had to return.

Daniels Scores Enlistments From Navy Yard

COMMANDANT WILLIAM R. RUSH, of the navy yard, today received a telegram from Secretary of the Navy Daniels, condemning the enlistment in the militia of navy yard employes. Secretary Daniels' telegram to Commandant Rush is as follows:

"Use every effort to prevent loss of men by militia. It is equally a patriotic duty for employes of the navy yard to remain at their work. Their services to their country in this capacity is as important as if they were in the field. To cripple the navy yard at this time is a most unpatriotic act."

low any plan that the President suggests, the leaders said today.

REPLY EXPECTED.

The administration expects the Carranza reply to its latest ultimatum demanding the release of the troopers now held prisoners at Chihuahua City not later than tomorrow. Present indications are that it either will be a flat refusal or an evasion, although strong pressure is reported being brought to bear upon Carranza by the Latin-American diplomats in Mexico City to meet the views of the United States and so prevent war.

A refusal will result in an immediate call for the joint session, which, the President already has assured the congressional leaders, he desires. And as indicating that it is almost certain to be held conference were in progress in the Capitol today advanced C troop to position of Mexican gun and K troop closing in tightly to the left.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, the Democratic whip, conferred with the President today regarding pending legislation and the proposed conference.

Afterward he said:

"DEPEND ON CONGRESS."

"Congress can be depended upon to meet this situation as patriotically as did the Congress which upheld President McKinley on Cuba. It will pass a resolution giving him full authority and ample funds or if he desires a declaration of war that will be forthcoming. The situation is very serious, but the President is handling it satisfactorily and without any partisanship."

The question of a call for $50,000 volunteers has not yet been disposed of and will not be until after the Carranza reply is received and the President puts the situation before Congress.

Secretary of War Baker said today that the troops are being sent forward as rapidly as possible. He refused details of where the various organizations are being sent, saying that General Funston is attending to that matter. The House was working on the army appropriation bill which has been amended to provide the cash for moving the militia and all other expenses incidental to the present troops movements while the Senate had before it the draft resolution which its committee on Saturday emasculated by removing the appropriation for caring for dependents of militiamen serving with the colors.

Carranza Wires for Carrizal Details.

By International News Service.

Mexico City, June 26.—Chief Executive Carranza has telegraphed to General Trevino at Chihuahua City to forward at once a complete report giving details of the battle at Carrizal. It is understood that this action was taken as a result of President Wilson's demand for a disavowal and the release of the American soldiers taken in the engagement.

War spirit is dominant here, though a change for the better in the international situation is indicated by efforts of certain high officials to make the government reconsider its decision to reject mediation proffers from Costa Rica and Honduras. The reply to these proposals has not yet gone forward and when it does it may be merely a statement of thanks, without any intimation of rejection or acceptance.

Foreign Minister Aguilar is understood to be strongly opposed to a flat rejection. His opinion carries considerable weight. Large numbers are responding to the government's call for volunteers. More than 2,000 already have been enrolled and are being drilled.

Two large camps are to be established on the outskirts of the capital. Encouraging reports from other large centres have been received at the war office. The offer of 45,000 Indians in the State of Mexico to join the army if the land taken from them during the Diaz regime is restored probably will be accepted.

HOW THEY FOUGHT AT CARRIZAL

By JACK HARDING.

Columbus, N. M., July 26.—"They shot hell out of us," said Private Sam Harris, Troop C, Tenth Cavalry, who has just reached here to be treated for an ugly bullet wound in his neck. The soldier was in the thick of the fight. His story is the first brought to the border by an individual.

He told how 700 Mexican Indians opened fire with hidden machine guns on a handful of American troopers, mowing them down with the precision of a scythe.

"Within half an hour of the beginning of the fight the Mexicans started flanking us. We could see the dust they kicked up as they started crawling and running with their bullies low, well off to the right and left wing in small groups.

"The bulk of the force kept behind some sort of shelter; we had no shelters.

"There was real satisfaction in knowing we killed our share of the Mexicans. It was tough work.

"When the fight began I remember waiting for a head to appear so that I could shoot at it. I was shaking like a leaf with the excitement of my first engagement, but I tried to keep cool.

"You wait,' I kept telling myself. 'You wait till you see something to shoot at.' And I did pretty soon. In perhaps about half a minute—it seemed like an hour—I saw a Mexican's head poke out from behind a fence post. I got a bead on it, and then let go with my rifle. How that Mexican jumped into the air and flopped. I think I killed him all right. He did not move again.

"I am felt good with that first shot, I shouted. I got almost ten, alone. My guess is that a good 100 Mexicans were left there in the mesquite and along the fence and ditch.

"But that machine gun got us. Sput, sput, sputter; it kept rattling all the time and every rattle ploughed into us.

"I don't know what happened to Captain Boyd or Captain Morey or Lieutenant Adair. I did not see them again after the Mexicans started flanking us. I was hitting the trail each our own way. There were not many of us left, though. The machine gun had attended to that.

"I got back to the Santo Domingo ranch house faster than I ever before hiked twelve miles. A few other troopers were there. A good many horses had bolted and their way back after they had bolted.

"We were picked up by the relief column of the Eleventh Cavalry, which was sent out to locate us. I was all in. My throat was parched. My tongue was swollen. I had my arm in a home-made sling to help ease my neck and shoulder where a Mexican bullet had ripped through.

"I reckon that's about all that I know. Troop K was on the right and Troop C—that's mine—was plumb in front of that machine gun.

"We were less than 100 yards from the Mexicans when they opened fire. Our numbers were little more than eighty and the Mexicans were close to 700.

"They just shot hell out of us."

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time In Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weakness? If so, you will be glad to learn that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can soon discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. Then with this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the first treatment and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. I have prescribed it for many weaknesses in minor eye troubles and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers are willing to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and it is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand. I prefer not to answer even my family."

Sir Roger Casement Goes on Trial for High Treason

By SYDNEY B. CAVE.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, June 26.—Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested while trying to smuggle arms and ammunition into Ireland for the rebels, was placed on trial in the high court of justice today charged with high treason.

When the indictment had been read and Sir Roger was asked how he would plead, he arose in the dock and in a quiet, firm voice replied:

"Not guilty."

Sitting with Casement's counsel was Michael F. Doyle, of Philadelphia, an American attorney who was retained by Sir Roger's sister and who is acting in an advisory capacity.

The prisoner presented a far different appearance from that which ever characterized him when he was arraigned in Bow street court for his preliminary hearing. At that time he wore a wrinkled suit of tweeds, his shoes were unlaced and his beard and hair were uncombed and ragged. When Sir Roger took his place in court today he was faultlessly attired in a frock coat and wore a fresh white collar and a black necktie. His hair and beard had been trimmed and were carefully combed. He was calm and composed and smiled as he nodded to friends among the spectators.

ADMITTANCE BY TICKETS.

The intense public interest in the trial and the famous prisoner was shown by the huge crowd which gathered outside the court seeking admittance. Only ticket holders, however, were permitted to enter the room. Alterations had been made in the court room to accommodate the large number of persons whose official connection with the case made their presence necessary. In addition to counsel and witnesses and newspaper correspondents, a special panel of 100 talesmen had been summoned.

In the centre of the room was a big array of counsel, their gowns and wigs giving a picturesque touch to the scene.

Presiding at the trial are Baron Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, and Justices Avory and Horridge. No sooner had the judges taken their seats than the clerk called out:

"The King vs. Casement."

OBJECTION OVERRULED.

Immediately after the trial was opened counsel for Casement made a technical objection to the indictment, asking that it be dismissed, but the objection was not entertained.

It had been reported that Casement would plead guilty, throwing himself on the mercy of the Court, but the developments showed that no such action had been contemplated. The trial of Daniel J. Bailey, the British soldier who accompanied Casement from Germany and who is also charged with with treason, will follow that of Sir Roger.

The crown's case against Sir Roger was opened by Sir Frederick E. Smith, the Attorney-General, who outlined the history of Sir Roger's anti-British activities.

WAR SUMMARY

That Verdun is still the important feature in the war news, despite the Russian claims, is indicated in the admission in a London dispatch that "Paris is evidently uneasy over the (Verdun) situation."

The dispatch says the Germans are tenaciously clinging to all their gains of last week.

No effort is made by Paris to belittle the loss of Fleury. Paris says: "Complete possession of the village of Fleury and of the Chapitre and Fumin Woods would permit the Germans to attack both in front and back of the Souville redoubt. The ridge of Fleury also would give a complete view of the French lines as far as the last barrier separating them from Verdun.

The need of relief to the valiant French at Verdun by British action elsewhere on the west front finds striking proof in the Berlin official.

All along the British front in France, from La Bassee Canal to the Somme and beyond, about sixty miles, there is great British activity. Berlin tells of the use by the British of poison gas in these attacks.

Petrograd today reports the Russians in Transylvania, after hurling back the Austrian forces opposing their advance. Petrograd has at other times reported the Russians overrunning this fertile section of Hungary—in the drive which resulted in disaster eighteen months ago.

Russia claims to have overrun the entire Austrian crownland of Bukowina, but this is combatted by the official Vienna statement which reports the occupation of new positions in the province by Austrian troops.

The great battles between the Slavs and Teutons still continue. The German thrust forward to nullify the Russian drive to the far south of this front is slowly progressing. Its menace to the Russian offensive is answered by Petrograd's report of the menacing of the Austrian right wing.

From Salonica is reported further aggressions by the allies in Greece. The dispatch tells of the seizure by the allies of the important port of Kavala, for which the allied generals have long yearned, and of one of the Greek islands. The allied pressure upon the Greek small nation may he expected to be followed by other seizures.

One result of the recent allied blockade of Greece is reported in the same dispatch; a Greek city is said to be "absolutely" without food.

On the Austro-Italian front the Italians have driven back the Austrians at several points.

Further seizures by Britain of neutral mails recalls the fact that the United States protest is still unanswered, though there were assurances of an early reply.

REPORT U-BOAT BRINGING NOTE TO WILSON

London, June 26.—The mysterious visit of the German submarine U-53 to the Spanish port of Cartagena this week is described by the Madrid correspondent to Lloyds Weekly News of today as having as its object the delivery of an autograph letter from the Kaiser to King Alfonso, conveying proposals for peace.

The correspondent also sends an unconfirmed report that another U-boat is on the way to New York with a "peace letter" for President Wilson. "Spanish papers," the dispatch says, "publish a telegram from Cadiz, saying an important personage states that another boat is on its way to New York, bearing an autograph letter from the Kaiser to President Wilson, and that it is now due there."

THREE KILLED BY IMMELMANN BEFORE FALL

Berlin, June 26.—The Lokal Anzeiger prints the following field letter from an eye-witness of Lieutenant Immelmann's death flight. Lieutenant Immelmann had a record of fifteen aeroplanes destroyed:

"I saw at a height of several thousand yards five aeroplanes in a hot fight.

"One of the Fokker biplanes has singled out his prey and doesn't leave him. While the big biplane only seeks to fly lower or higher, the Fokker cuts off the escape each time. Suddenly the big machine rolls—'Hurrah; he's hit!' is roared from a thousand throats. I was watching closely and noticed that the Fokker, too, was making curious tumbling motions, righting itself like an animal mortally wounded, then fluttering down, first slowly, then faster.

"A sudden jerk brings the machine again to a horizontal position. Thank God, I think, and breathe easier, when suddenly the Fokker overturns completely, the tail falls away, one of the wings flutters off and, with an uncanny whistling sound, the machine plunges from 6,000 feet earthward and strikes with a dull thud.

"I ran as fast as possible to the spot. The motor had buried itself deep in the earth, burying the pilot under it. A crowd of soldiers quickly gathered.

"'It's a Frenchman,' say some. Another answers, 'Unfortunately, it's a German.' But he gets threatening looks from the crowd. Meanwhile some of us have with great effort succeeded in turning over the motor, and several officers appear and supervise the examination of the dead. Is it an Englishman, Frenchman or German? None knows for certain.

"At last we have opened the leather coat. The first thing we see is the Pour Le Merit decoration. Immelmann or Boelcke? An anxious silence fell on all standing around. Then we found the Iron Cross and then the monogram 'M. I.' on the shirt.

"'Our poor Immelmann,' said a high officer present, and sadly we repeated it.

"'Immelmann didn't make it easy for his enemies. He had already shot down three enemy fliers, and at the time of his death plunge he was engaged in a fight with two enemy machines."

FRENCH REGAIN SOME GROUND AT VERDUN

By International News Service.

London, June 26.—German troops continued their tremendous efforts against French positions on the Verdun front last night, but the attack broke down before the stubborn resistance of the defenders.

The French War Office in its official communique today stated that the German assaults were not only repulsed, but that French counter attacks won back part of the ground which the Germans had captured on the eastern side of the Meuse.

The struggle around the fortified village of Fleury is still in progress. There has been no let-up in the intensity of the bombardment. A great artillery duel is raging on both sides of the Meuse river.

The text of the French official communique follows:

"In the Argonne an attack directed by the enemy against one of our small posts at La Fille Morte was repulsed with grenades. On the left bank of the Meuse there was an artillery duel which was particularly sharp in the region on LeMort Homme.

"On the right bank a German attack launched last night against our positions west of the Thiaumont wood was completely checked by our curtain of fire and our musketry. In the course of a local operation between Fumin wood and Chenois wood we captured some of the enemy's trench elements. In the other sections only artillery actions are reported.

CARPATHIANS CROSSED BY RUSSIANS

By International News Service.

Petrograd, June 26.—Russian troops have crossed the Carpathian mountains into Transylvania, it is stated in official dispatches received from the headquarters of General Brusiloff.

Austro-Hungarian forces defending the Carpathian passes were hurled back by the relentless sweep of the Russians and are again in retreat.

The penetration of Transylvania (the plains of Hungary lying west of the Carpathians) is the most serious blow struck at Austria-Hungary since the war began. During their offensive in the Winter of 1914-1915 the Russians got no farther than the mountain wall. But now, with the way open into the Hungarian plains, the Russians are in a position to menace Budapest.

"One night before retiring I was troubled with an itching and in the morning I found that my face was all broken out with little pimples, and then they came on my neck and hands. The pimples became scaly and my skin was so sore that I had to bathe it with cold water to keep the pain down, and I scratched and my face became erupted. I was so red and sore I was ashamed to go outdoors at all. It lasted about three months.

Orpet May Be Saved by Own Story, Writes Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX.

Waukegan, Ill., June 26.—Before this week is out, William Orpet will almost surely know his fate.

Will will that be?

Will he be acquitted of the murder of Marian Lambert and set free?

Will he be convicted of it and sentenced to spend long years in prison, while his youth rots away in dungeon walls?

Or will the jury disagree and will he have to go in jail through weary months and then undergo again the nerve-racking strain of another trial?

Which of these things the blind goddess of destiny are the Fates spinning for him?

Not one of the people in the court-room who have followed this case from beginning to end with minute care, and whose familiarity with other murder cases give them some right to judge such matters, will hazard or even guess on the subject. The most that even the lawyers on either side will say is that each "hopes" to win.

VENTURE NO PROPHECIES.

But nobody dares prophesy what the outcome will be, because there was never a case like this before in which almost every particle of evidence was double actioned and pointed as much one way as it does the other. You can prove by the same arguments that Marian Lambert committed suicide that you can use in showing that William Orpet must have slain her.

This has brought about a unique situation in law, for the defense has subpoenaed many of the prosecution's witnesses and the same testimony that was used to try and convict William Orpet will be used in the attempt to set him free.

A curious illustration of how complicated the evidence is, is illustrated by the last letter that Marian Lambert wrote to her Sunday school teacher, Miss Ramsay, and which was discovered in her school book where she was found dead. She had written this letter on the night before she met Will Orpet and after she had gotten his telephone message making an appointment for them to meet the next morning at the Sacred Heart Convent Station.

In this letter she says:

Your note to me about my eighteenth birthday has just arrived. I want to thank you sincerely for it, for I am glad you think possibly I may amount to something. I fancy that you thought me peculiar because of my giggling tendency.

At first I giggled because I was very happy, and thought that the world was good and because I did not realize its responsibility. Then I laughed because I was afraid and did not want others to know that I was not happy.

You may think it queer to laugh when one feels sad, but I am queer anyway. I do want to be some one who will be doing good. I found the W. C. T. U. a great help to me. It seems to me I see things in a bigger way and in a way I never did before.

May I thank you once more for your thoughtfulness.

With love, MARIAN

P. S.—Have you heard of the W. C. T. meeting next Saturday. Will be in town, and will try to meet some of the others who do not come very often.

The State introduced this letter to show that the girl had no thought of suicide when she went to meet Orpet, because she was making a definite appointment for the following Saturday.

The defence will contend that the beginning of the letter shows that she was sad and depressed; that her gaiety was affected to deceive those with whom she associated, and that she recognized, herself, that she had a mental twist and was "queer."

And, as Henry James used to say, "there you are." And there you are at every turn of the evidence which spells murder or suicide, according to the light of your own personal prejudices.

It is understood that in his defence William Orpet will admit his illicit relationship with Maran Lambert and that he sent her medicine to take. He will also admit that he wrote the alibi letters before he left Madison, and that he left them with his schoolmate to mail. He will admit that he came to Lake Forest on the 5th and telephoned Marian from the station, as the telephone girl who "listened in" asserted that he did.

DEFENCE TO CLAIM SUICIDE.

He will admit that he and the girl walked through the woods, that they stopped and talked, that he told her that he was engaged to Celestia Younker, and was done with her, and that she begged and implored him not to leave her. He will tell that at last he left her, but, hearing a little cry, he turned back and found her fall in the snow, and that when he reached her she was dead.

And he will assert that he did not know what she took that killed her; that he saw no bottle or paper, by which she could have carried it, and that in sheer panic he fled.

He will claim that the reason that he came down from Madison to see her was because she threatened suicide and that he hoped to persuade her not to do anything rash, that the reason he wrote the alibi letters was to keep his parents from finding out that he had come away from Madison after they had told him not to do so, and that the reason he left the girl lying dead in the snow without calling for help was because he wanted to avoid being mixed up in a scandal that would affect his standing at school.

ORPET HOLDS OWN FATE.

That, in substance, is the story that William Orpet will tell in his own defense.

What will the jury think of it? How will it stand up under the withering fire of cross-examination that Joslyn will turn upon it? For it does not even attempt to explain the heart of the mystery—what became of the box, or bottle, which contained that which ended the girl's life but which she could not have disposed of herself.

When William Orpet goes upon the witness stand he will absolutely hold his fate in his own two hands. Every bit of the evidence in the case can be taken either to prove a presumption of his guilt or his innocence. Everything that has been shown makes it possible and creditable that either he could have killed the girl or she could have killed herself.

It is his testimony that puts the keystone in the arch, that makes or his conviction, depends entirely upon whether the jury believes his story of what happened in the morning in Helm's Woods, or whether they disbelieve it.

DRAWS NO SYMPATHY.

Never did so much depend upon a man's personality as depends upon his, and, also for William Orpet, his is peculiarly repellent.

He has none of the grace and charm and sweetness that draw hearts towards so many sinners and makes them forgive them their sins because they are so lovable. Nor does he win for himself any person's sympathy. When you look on him you are simply pitying abstract youth, and because age and experience could weep tears of blood over the folly that wrecked a life in its beginning.

4 MORE YOUNG WOMEN "WAR BRIDES"

Four more young women became war brides today in Greater Boston. Their husbands this afternoon left Framingham on the troop trains for Mexico.

The first society girl to become a war bride was Miss Ruth Nickerson of Dedham, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Nickerson, who was married today to Edward Marchmont Wheelwright, member of A Battery, Field Artillery.

The ceremony took place at Riverdale, the beautiful Dedham home of the bride, and was performed by the Rev. Allen McLane Taylor of Christ Episcopal Church, Mattapan. There were no attendants and only the immediate families were present. The bride was given away by her brother, Albert W. Nickerson.

The court waived the five-day marriage law. Within a few hours the groom was on the way to join his battery, which was at the moment of the ceremony, was preparing to entrain for the Mexican border.

Wheelwright received a brief leave of absence, and with Miss Nickerson hurried to the Dedham District Court. Miss Emery Green, trying a case, ordered a fifteen minute recess to hear the urgent plea of the young couple. He immediately granted the request, waiving the five-day writ, and Town Clerk Hill issued the marriage license. They then hurried to the bride's home, where the minister was waiting.

The bride is a member of the Vincent Club and the Tilton Club. The groom is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Wheelwright of High street, Dedham. He is a Harvard and Dartmouth man and a Boston broker.

Another was added to Greater Boston's list of "war brides" today. She is Mrs. Le Baron Russell Briggs, Jr., formerly Miss Elizabeth Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason of Bailey road, Watertown.

The bridegroom is the son of Dean Briggs of Harvard, graduated from Harvard last year and has been an instructor in physiology there at Harvard. He is also a member of the militia.

Judge Abbott in the Waltham court on Saturday, granted young Briggs a waiver of the five-day law.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride today, and immediately after the ceremony they hastened to Framingham to entrain with the Eighth regiment.

HURRY TO GET WEDDING RING.

Edna M. Austen of No. 26 Bradshaw street, Medford, today became the wife of Lieutenant William J. Bogrette of E company, Fifth regiment, just before he entrained for Mexico.

When Lieutenant Bogrette, who lives at No. 45 Pembroke street in Medford, received a telephone order this morning to prepare to start at once, he telephoned Miss Austen and informed her of the change in their affairs. An automobile was requisitioned, a special licensee was issued in Medford and a permit obtained from the Malden court waiving the five-day clause.

Special messengers were rushed from Boston with the wedding ring, a great American flag was obtained and the ceremony was performed by City Clerk Charles H. Loomis in the Aldermanic Chamber.

Miss Jennie B. Austen, a sister of the bride, was married this morning to Mayor Haines and all the clerks employed at City Hall were among the spectators.

Lieutenant Bogrette left at once to join his regiment.

HURRY TO CITY HALL.

Joseph William McNabb, twenty-four, of No. 197 Charter street, a member of the Ninth Regiment, was today granted permission by Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court to marry Miss Grace F. Collins, twenty-three years old, of No. 21 Hancock street, Dorchester, before leaving with his outfit for Mexico. McNabb was given his license at City Hall, and immediately went to the courthouse, where the five-day law was waived.

FREE SCHOOL HEAD ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Frank C. Heald, principal of the Ames Grammar School of Dedham, was found not guilty of assault and battery on Peter McLoughlin, the fifteen-year-old pupil, in the Dedham District Court today. McLoughlin testified that he was made to stay after school by Mr. Heald on February 8 and was cruelly punished. Three other boys told substantially the same story. Mr. Heald did not testify and had no witnesses. Judge Grover rendering his decision after the boys' testimony had been given.

PLOT TO BLOW UP POSTOFFICE IN NEW YORK

By International News Service.

New York, June 27.—An attempt to blow up the postoffice in the Federal building was frustrated today. Nine sticks of dynamite and a dynamite bomb wrapped in paper which was on fire, were found this morning by a watchman in the first floor of the postoffice.

The bundls was found just before the office had been opened for business. It lay on the floor near a storm door in the south side of the building and not far from the stairway. Watchman Harris' attention was attracted by the smoke from the smouldering wrapper of the explosives.

As soon as he had put out the fire and saw the contents of the package he notified the police. Inspector Ekern, head of the bureau of combustibles, was summoned and found that the package contained enough explosives to have wrecked the building.

The police began an investigation.

DOWNTOWN OFFICE BUILDING LOOTED

When tenants of the office building at No. 74 India street went to work today they found the building had been entered and ransacked some time between Saturday night and this morning and articles to the value of several hundred dollars removed. There are twenty offices in the building. The police believe that boys were responsible for the break and that entrance was gained through a rear window.

18 Fined $5, 3 Held in Chelsea Gambling Raid

Twenty-one young men were in the Chelsea Police Court today as a result of a raid made yesterday by the Watch and Ward Society. Eighteen of them paid fines of $5 each for being present where gaming implements were found, and three others had their cases continued until July 6, as they pleaded not guilty to the charge of keeping a gambling house and assisting in maintaining one. All of the men arrested came from Chelsea, Revere, Lynn and Boston.

Jacob Baker, alias "Izzey" Wallace, was charged with maintaining and keeping a gambling nuisance, and Joseph Walton and Harry McManus were charged with assisting him. All three were held in $200. Melvin Breath, who has been appearing for Mayor Malone of Chelsea, in the recent probe of conditions in that city, appeared for the arrested men.

Rope Snaps, Puts City Hall Flag at Half-Mast

The flag on City Hall today was at half-mast and upside down as a result of one of the halliards breaking, letting the flag fly loose. The emblem was badly torn by being swung against the pole by the wind.

On arriving at City Hall Mayor Curley noticed that the flag was at half-mast and upside down, and summoned Custodian of City Hall Daniel J. Sheehan to his office to find out the cause. In the meantime many telephone calls had been received from people who were inquiring why the flag was at half-mast.

Custodian Sheehan, with the City Hall reporters, went to the roof of the building, where the pole sets, and the former started to climb the pole. He weighs over 200 pounds, and climbed half way up the pole when he felt it bending under his weight, and returned to the roof. There he cut the halliards, and took the flag down.

FINE AUTOIST $50 IN SOMERVILLE COURT

Barney Johnson, a chauffeur of East Saugus, was fined $50 and sentenced to two weeks in the House of Correction for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor in Somerville on Sunday. He appealed, and was held in $500 on charge of drunkenness against him was placed on file. The police state that he was operating his machine on Broadway, Somerville, at the rate of forty-five miles an hour, and had six adults and three children in the machine, which was bound for Lexington.

COURT CLERK SMITH IS QUARTERMASTER

Mark E. Smith, clerk of Charlestown court, was today appointed quartermaster of the Fifth Regiment by Colonel Willis W. Stover, in place of Jackson Caldwell, who is over the age limit and must retire. Mr. Smith has spent many years in the militia, retiring last year with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, but with a chance for active duty with the Fifth in Mexico, he accepted ah post of quartermaster of the Charlestown regiment.

COL. ROOSEVELT COMES OUT FOR HUGHES; ASKS MOOSE TO FOLLOW

Oyster Bay, June 26.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today came out publicly and unreservedly in support of Charles E. Hughes for the presidency.

In a letter to the Progressive National Committee, Colonel Roosevelt reaffirms his decision not to accept the Progressive nomination for President, which was tendered him at the convention in Chicago, and gives his reasons. He says in part:

In my judgment, the nomination of Mr. Hughes meets the conditions set forth in the statement of the Progressive National Committee, issued last January, and in my own statements.

Under existing conditions, the nomination of a third ticket would, in my judgment, be merely a move in the interest of the election of Mr. Wilson.

I regard Mr. Hughes as a man whose public record is a guarantee that "he will not merely stand for a program of clean-cut, straightout Americanism before election, but will resolutely and in good faith put it through if elected."

He is beyond all comparison better fitted to be President than Mr. Wilson. It would be a grave detriment to the country to re-elect Mr. Wilson.

I shall, therefore, strongly support Mr. Hughes. Such being the case, it is unnecessary to say that I cannot accept the nomination on a third ticket. I do not believe that there should be a third ticket. I believe that when any fellow Progressive coolly consider the question they will for the most part take this position. They and I have but one purpose—the purpose to serve our common country. It is my deep conviction that at this moment we can serve it only by supporting Mr. Hughes.

AS TO HYPHENATES.

It is urged against Mr. Hughes that he was supported by the various so-called German-American alliances. I believe that the attitude of these professional German-Americans was due, not in the least to any liking for Mr. Hughes, but solely to their antagonism to me. They were bound to defeat me for the nomination. The only way by which they could achieve this object was by supporting Mr. Hughes and they supported him accordingly, without any regard to other considerations.

I need hardly repeat what I have already said in stern reprobation of this professional German-American element—the element typified by the German-American alliances and the similar bodies, which have, in the pre-nomination campaign, played not merely an un-American but a thoroughly anti-American part.

These men have nothing in common with the great body of Americans who are in whole or in part of German blood; and who are precisely as good Americans as those of any other ancestry.

TRIED AMERICANS.

There are not, and never have been, in all our land, better citizens than the great mass of the men and women of German birth or descent who have been or are being completely merged in our common American nationality; a nationality distinct from any in Europe, for Americans who are good Americans are no more German-Americans than they are English-Americans, or Irish-Americans, or Scandinavian-Americans. They are Americans and nothing else.

No good American, whatever his ancestry or creed, can have any feeling except scorn and detestation for those professional German-Americans who seek to make the American President in effect a viceroy of the German Emperor.

Mr. Hughes' character and his whole course of conduct in public affairs justify us in the assured conviction that the fact that these men have for their own purposes supported him will, in no shape or way, affect his public actions before or after election. His entire public life is a guarantee of this.

The events of the last three and a half years have shown that as much cannot be said for Mr. Wilson. In Mr. Wilson's case we do not have to consider his words, but his deeds. His deeds absolutely contradict his words; and for the matter of that his words absolutely contradict one another.

We owe all of our present trouble with the professional German-American element in the United States to Mr. Wilson's timid and vacillating course during the last two years.

The defenders of Mr. Wilson have alleged in excuse for him that he confronted a difficult situation. As regards Mexico, the situation which Mr. Wilson confronted was nothing like as difficult as that which President McKinley confronted in connection with Cuba and the Philippines at the time of the Spanish war.

THE PRIME DUTY.

Without any regard to what the personal feelings of any of us may be as regards the action of the Republican convention, I wish very solemnly to ask the representatives of the Progressive party to consider at this time only the welfare of the people of the United States.

We shall prove false to our ideals and our professions if, in this grave crisis of the nation's life, we permit ourselves to be swerved from the one prime duty of serving with cool judgment and single-minded devotion the nation's needs.

Our own political fortunes, individually and collectively, are of no consequence whatever when compared with the honor and welfare of the people of the United States. Such things do not count when weighed in the balance against our duty to serve well the country in which, after we are dead, our children and our children's children are to live.

The world is passing through a great crisis and no man can tell what trial and jeopardy will have to be faced by this nation during the years immediately ahead.

There is now no longer before us for decision the question as to what particular man we may severally most desire to see at the head of the government.

We can decide only whether during these possibly vital years this country shall be entrusted to the leadership of Hughes or Mr. Wilson.

TRIED AND FOUND WANTING.

Mr. Wilson and his party have in actual practice lamentably failed to safeguard the interest and honor of the United States.

They have brought us to impotence abroad and to division and weakness at home.

They have dulled the moral sense of the people.

They have taught us that peace, the peace of cowardice and dishonor and indifference to the welfare of others, is to be put above righteousness, above the stern and unflinching performance of duty whether the duty is pleasant or unpleasant.

Yet in Mexico they have failed even to secure the peace which they thus sought; and they have failed in spite of the most ample opportunity and most ample warning, to prepare in any real fashion to meet the crisis which their own policy invited.

They have taught us to accept adroit elocution as a substitute for straightforward and efficient action. They have raised indecision, hesitancy and vacillation into a settled governmental policy.

DEEDS AS WELL AS WORDS.

Mr. Hughes has shown in his career the instinct of efficiency which will guarantee that, under him, the government will once more work with vigor and force.

He possesses that habit of straightforward thinking which means that his words will be correlated with his deeds and translated into facts.

His past career is the warrant for our belief that he will be the unfaltering opponent of that system of invisible government which finds expression in the domination of the party boss and the party machine.

His past career is a guarantee that whatever he says before election will be made good by his acts after election.

Morally, his public record shows him to be a man of unbending integrity; intellectually, it shows him to be a man of original and trained ability.

We have the alternative of continuing in office an administration which has proved a lamentable failure, or of putting into office an administration which we have every reason to believe will function with efficiency for the interest and honor of all our people.

Progressive Chiefs Meet in Chicago

Chicago, June 26.—Facing a split in the party apparently as wide as that in the Republican party in 1912, Progressive chieftains from all parts of the United States gather in Chicago today for the meeting of the National Committee, which is expected to determine whether the organization shall continue to live as a power in national politics or whether it shall merely cease to exist temporarily.

It is believed that George W. Perkins is prepared to offer a plan, the principal features of which are that the organization shall be maintained and Justice Hughes' name may be placed at the head of the ticket. It was the opinion of many committeemen, however, that the present meeting will refer the whole question of whether to support the Republican nominee to the individual State committees.

Burglars Leave a Note Telling About Robbery

When employes of the Houghton Mifflin Company of No. 4 Park street reported for work today, a note pasted on a door informed them the building had been entered since the office was closed Saturday afternoon. Entrance was gained by means of a window that opened into the Old Granary Burying Ground. Nothing has been reported missing to the police.

The note read as follows:

Dear Mr. Houghton Mifflin: We dropped in for a short visit to look the place over. We just 'borrowed' a few trinkets for cigarettes, also cigars & liquor.

"Don't be foolish and try to trace us because we don't like the police force. We will have to leave now as we have a regular job in the suburbs." The note was signed "Sincerely" with no further designations to the writer.

Postoffice and Bank Employes Are Indicted

The Federal Grand Jury reported to Judge Morton today, returning indictments against two bank employes and several persons employed in various postoffices.

Among them are indictments against Harry A. Jones, former assistant cashier and clerk of the Stoneham National Bank, charged with embezzlement of $44,000 and making false entries; Edward F. Davis, a former employe of the Webster National Bank of Webster; James P. Kingsley, employed at the South Station, charged with embezzlement of $150; Frank L. Pierson, postmaster at Leominster, Everett H. Moore of the Holden postoffice; Thomas F. A. Casey, formerly employed at the South Station charged with the larceny of parcel post matter, and William A. Phelon, clerk at the tube room at the South Terminal, charged with the larceny of $1 from a letter.

JAW BROKEN, CLAIMS WOMAN STRUCK HER

Providence, R. I. June 26.—At the Rhode Island Hospital, with a broken jaw and other bruises, Mrs. Rosie Zurmbick, fifty-six, of North Providence, told the police today that Mrs. Josephine Datsa, forty, assaulted her after she accused her children of "stealing her eggs." Mrs. Datsa was arrested. The injured woman was found near her home at No. 14 Mildred street unconscious and sent to the hospital after examination by Dr. Frank B. Brazil, medical examiner. Mrs. Zurmbick claims the other woman knocked her down and kicked her. The women are neighbors.

HETTY GREEN IN CRITICAL CONDITION

New York, June 26.—Mrs. Hetty Green, "the world's wealthiest woman," who was eighty, November 21, is ill at her home, No. 7 West Ninetieth street. She has had two and possibly three, paralytic strokes in the past month and a half, and as a result she is now practically helpless.

She had a bad spell but improved somewhat, and it was said at the house today that her condition was considered critical.

It was added that no effort was being made to test her power of speech or her ability to recognize those about her. There was hope, it was said, that she would take a turn for the better despite her age. For weeks Mrs. Green has been unable to walk and recently, according to those around her, has been steadily failing.

Daily the nurses have been accustomed to wheel her to one of the front windows where she can look out over Central Park. She sits there, with scarcely a move, for hours, gazing at the trees.

Mrs. Green, even in her illness, has clung to her life of comparative isolation. She and her only son, Colonel Edward Green, have occupied for a year and more the two plain brick, four-story houses, Nos. 5 and 7 West Ninetieth street.

MRS. M. C. TOWLE OF DORCHESTER DEAD

Mrs. Mary C. Towle of No. 1428 Dorchester avenue, wife of Dr. Henry C. Towle, died at her home early today. She had been active in Catholic charitable and church work. At one time she was president of the Ladies' Charitable Aid Society of St. Mary's Infant Asylum. Mrs. Towle was active in the forming of St. Peter's Church. She leaves in addition to her husband, two daughters. The funeral will be at St. Ambrose's Church, Wednesday, at 10 o'clock.

Dr. Towle is seriously ill and was not immediately told of the death of his wife.

GETS 2 MONTHS FOR STRIKING POLICEMAN

Dennis O'Brien, twenty-three, of No. 61 Havre street, East Boston, was arraigned in the East Boston Court today, charged with assault and battery on Patrolman George Scott of the East Boston police station, in Maverick square, Sunday. He was found guilty and sentenced to two months in the House of Correction, which he appealed, and was held in $300. According to testimony, O'Brien punched Scott in the face.

Both Teams Improved Sox Strike Their Gait

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

If baseball followers of Boston are not satisfied with the showing made by the two teams representing the city, they are hard to please. The week opens with the World's Champions in fourth place or practically in a tie for third position while the Braves have climbed to third place through some fine pitching.

The champions have two games to play with the Athletics before they leave for a short trip over the holiday, meeting the Senators at their home ground, June 28, for the first of a four-game series, passing from there to Philadelphia for four games, returning to Fenway Park on July 6, opening with the Cleveland club, which is the first of the Western clubs to show upon the second invasion of the East.

The past week has proven a good one for the World Beaters. In the six games they played, five were victories, three of these being by shoutout scores, one a no-hit, no-run game. Where the team has not been hitting to any great extent, some of this weakness visible must be credited to the effectiveness of the opposing pitchers, just as one likes to record the few hits made off the home twirlers.

CHAMPS SHOW GOOD.

The number of hits made by the champions, thirty-six, corresponds with the total of the visitors, but the champions put fifteen runs up to their opponents' nine, which may be considered better baseball, or getting the "breaks" or a little of each. When scores are as close as these have been the team that wins must get the benefit of the breaks, and none can deny that the Red Sox were favored in this respect.

The main thing, however, is the improvement in the pitching effectiveness of the staff of twirlers. George Foster was a big winner in 1915, and his no-hit, no-run game points clearly to his return to that kind of work. Babe Ruth is another who has arrived, and few pitchers in the game today are more feared than he when up at the bat. This goes both ways for Babe. He is pretty hard to hit and hits pretty hard. Ernie Shore won many games for the champions in '15, and has had a long period wherein he just couldn't pitch.

This has been the result of a cold that settled in his arm. His recent work would seem to point to his return as a winning hitcher. Carl Mays, Dutch Leonard and Vean Gregg are all ready to work, the underhand twirler delivering the ball, while Leonard appears a little unsettled. In the past two games, "Dutch" has been off his form, but he declares he never felt better in his life, so he is sure to be heard from.

BARRY WILL HELP.

The team in other particulars looks good, although it will be a whole lot stronger when Jack Barry gets back at second base. Jack is a very valuable man to any team, and the champions should be complimented upon the showing they have made without this man's defensive and offensive strength. Janvrin is doing as well as expected of him at second, but hits go through there that would be stopped by Barry. "Jannie" back at short with Barry at the middle corner will make much difference in the team's work. This condition is not likely to exist until the team returns from the Eastern trip. Manager Carrigan expects Barry to be ready at that time.

Hooper, Lewis and Walker form a classy outfield. "Tilly" is fast gaining ground in the appreciation of the fans. His throwing arm is an asset to any club. It adds another wonderful arm to the outfield matching the work of Hooper and Lewis. Hits to this outfield are rarely if ever stretched, each opposing baserunner being well aware of the danger in taking liberties with the arm of either Harry, Duffy or Tilly.

SITUATION COMFORTABLE.

Being within easy striking distances of the top, with its pitchers ready and fit and the team apparently ready to hit, the situation so far as the champions are concerned is a very comfortable one. They have these two games with the Connie Macks and the eight games away and then they are home for a long stay in what promises to be good baseball weather.

The appearance of Summer temperature with bright warm sunlight has done much for all the teams, both in the playing end and at the box offices. This proves that good weather is needed to bring clubs to a proper degree of efficiency and to call the patrons of the game from their labors to the parks.

While the World's Champions have been gaining ground at home, the Braves have climbed over the Giants and have given the National League champions a battle. This club's staff of pitchers have developed with the result above mentioned. Captain Johnny Evers is back in the game, his presence having much to do with the improvement in the club's work on the field. The Braves return to their field on June 28, playing there until July 5 when they leave for the road again.

CRICKET NOTES

All games in the State League were played on Saturday. It was like starting the season all over again, as many players had not handled a bat or ball for three weeks.

* * *

Heavy scoring was to be expected and was accomplished by many clubs, five teams going over the century mark, while marks a record for one day's play.

* * *

Beverly Blues enjoyed quite a picnic at the expense of St. George's, scoring 150 runs for 7 wickets. Captain Bottomly of the latter team tried out all his players in bowling after the game was lost, but discovered nothing new.

* * *

Frank Hague of Canton, champion batsman of 1914, recovered his batting eye against the West Indians, scoring 75 not out against some of the best bowlers in the league.

* * *

In defeating Needham the Brockton team scored heavily with 106 runs for 8 wickets, administering the first defeat of the season to the losers and are now in a tie with the former club as runners-up to Beverly White.

* * *

With the exception of President Dixon scoring 35 not out and batting through the inning the Caribbean bowlers had the Everett batters entirely at their mercy. Dixon has been the most consistent batter for his club this season.

* * *

Captain Fairburn's inning of 82 against St. Georges was in the nature of a picnic at the expense of the fielders, he had no less than 7 chances in the field and became overconfident otherwise he might have secured a not out.

Ocean Race Next Event A Gala Field Assured

Despite the fact that to date less than a dozen owners have signified their intention of entering the Eastern Yacht Club's invitation ocean race, which starts at 10 o'clock next Saturday morning at Newport and finishes off Marblehead, H. A. Morss, chairman of the regatta committee, states that he expects the entries to pour in during the week.

"I look for more than fifty schooners, sloops and yawls to go to the starting point," stated Mr. Morss to the AMERICAN today. "Anyhow, the success of the big annual race is assured."

The $1,000 gold cup, offered by Captain Harold S. Vanderbilt, rear commodore of the New York Yacht Club, goes to the first-division schooner over 55-feet rating.

In order to acquire title to the trophy, the race must be won three times by one owner. A silver replica will be awarded each winning race. In addition a second prize will be given in each class, providing four or more start, and a third prize will be awarded if seven or more boats compete.

At 10 a. m. next Saturday the warning gun will be fired from the commodore's boat, which will be at the starting line off Brenton Reef Lightship, and ten minutes later the final gun, sending all schooners away, will be touched off. Five minutes after the schooners start on their long journey, the sloops and yawls will get under way.

RULES FOR THE RACE.

The finishing line will be between the beacon on Marblehead Rock and a white flag on the committee boat, which will be about one-quarter of a mile northeast of Marblehead Rock.

If any of the boats finish after darkness sets in, the captain must identify his craft by burning a club coster signal when approaching the committee boat and pass near enough and give his craft's name and number.

Any yachts forced into port owing to stress of weather or other causes may do so without being disqualified and allowances will be reckoned by the Eastern Yacht Club tables on a basis of 165 miles.

The regatta committee announces that all yachts will race in cruising trim, with the sailmakers barred from 8 p. m. to 4 a. m. No restrictions will be made on the number of the crew in any of the boats.

ENTRIES CLOSE FRIDAY.

Entries must be received by H. A. Morss, No. 201 Devonshire street, before 4 p. m. Friday night. The age and ownership of all yachts, with measurements under Eastern Yacht Club rules must be given. It was decided that the committee might accept post entries at its discretion.

The Navy Department has detailed the torpedo boat destroyer Balch to act as committee boat for the race. The Balch will be under command of Captain Hanrahan.

Although there is a great deal of variation in the choice of the winner of the Vanderbilt Gold Cup, many close followers of the long-starting game are inclined that the Timandra of the Eastern Yacht Club will be the first boat to cross the finish line. Commodore John R. Fallon, owner of the Timandra, has been very successful with this boat.

GREAT FIELD IN RACE.

Rear Commodore H. S. Vanderbilt, donor of the gold cup, has entered his Vagrant, which will sail under the colors of the New York Yacht Club. The schooner Virginia has been entered by L. F. Crofoot and it is expected Commodore R. M. Sears of the Eastern Yacht Club will send his Constellation to the starting mark.

Under favorable conditions the boats should begin to put in an appearance off Marblehead some time Sunday morning, but if the wind is light and ahead, the winners may not be decided until late Sunday or early Monday morning.

It is safe to say that those desiring to witness the finish of the ocean race will have their wishes fulfilled by reaching Marblehead Sunday morning around 10 o'clock.

Wiley and Walthour Coming Back in Long Race with Didier on Mid-Week Revere Card

So successful was the last mid-week meet at the Revere Cycle Track, Manager Nat Butler has scheduled another double-header motor-paced bill for Wednesday night.

One of the races will be over the 25-mile route and will have as contestants George Wiley, Bobby Walthour and Leon Didier. The other event will be a ten-mile match race between Fred Herbert of Fall River, the newest sensation in the paced ranks, and "Pinkie" Turville of Revere.

Wiley and Walthour are none the worse for the shaking up which they received at the beach ovel, Saturday night, when the lights went out during the running of the feature event, and both riders are prepared to give Didier a stiff contest.

While the unforeseen happening Saturday night was no fault of Manager Butler's, it has, nevertheless, taught him a lesson and he plans to have a new lighting system installed immediately. It will be ready for use Wednesday night.

Springfield Tops Eastern League in 5 Classes

Springfield and New London remain the best batting and fielding teams respectively in the Eastern League. The former is batting at a .267 clip and the latter sports a fielding average of .963.

The hitting throughout the league last week was excellent, Lawrence being the only club that load ground. The Spinners had nine points clipped off their former figures.

Five teams improved in fielding, four lost ground and one retained its former figure. Lynn, New London and Portland all gained considerable ground on Springfield in hitting.

Springfield leads the league in five distinctive departments. The Green Sox have scored the greatest number of runs, made the most hits, excel in total bases, have knocked out the most two-base hits and are showing the way in home-run hitting.

They have cracked out seventy-two doubles and have made thirteen continuous trips around the sacks on "good-night" raps.

Portland tops the circuit in hitting out triples. The Duffs have made fifteen. Lynn is leading the base stealing. The Shoemakers have a record of seventy-eight pilfers. Springfield with sixty-nine is second.

New London, with sixty-four, leads in sacrifice hits. New London has made the least number of errors, fifty-nine.

Lynn leads in making misplays, with 103. New Haven has also gone past the century mark in the error column, having 102 slipups.

City Plans Big Swimming Meet for July 4

In connection with the July Fourth celebration planned by the city a set of swimming races will be held in the Charles River Basin at 4 o'clock. A series of handicap events will be contested in addition to a team race, all for seniors. Then comes junior races for boys under sixteen years of age and another set for girls under sixteen. In addition there is a women's race at 100 yards.

The senior program calls for a 100, 440 and 880-yard swim with three prizes in each event. Fancy diving comes next and then comes the relay race of teams of four men each, each man to swim 100 yards. For the juniors 50 and 100-yard races have been arranged, in addition to a fancy diving competition. The junior girls swim in 50 and 100-yard events.

First prize in each senior event will be a gold watch, with a gold medal for second and a silver medal for third. Entries close Saturday, July 1, with William H. Cuddy at the St. Joseph's Total Abstinence Society, 95 Cambridge street, Boston. The meet is sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. U. and no entrance fee is charged.

U. S. JOCKEYS STAR IN GERMAN STAKE

The three American jockeys who are now riding in Germany finished first, second and third at Hoppegarten out of sixteen starters, where the Logierhaus Handicap was recently run off. Archbald won the race on Herr Haniel's four-year-old Polymous filly Cresta, Sumter was second on Paresa and Korb third on Herculles.

GROSS PRIZE FOR PATON.

BELMONT TO AID WOMEN PLAYERS

Inasmuch as the Belmont Spring Country Club course has been chosen for the play of the women's championship of the U. S. G. A., the executive committee at the club is doing all in its power to aid the home players. Consequently they have arranged a mixed foursome to be played Wednesday. Every member of the Women's Golf Association of Greater Boston has been invited to compete.

In order that they will be perfectly familiar with the course the committee has extended the free use of the course to all the women for tomorrow. On that day they can indulge in practice rounds and thus form an intimate acquaintance with the changed conditions which prevail.

JOE WILHOIT IS IN TOWN.

Outfielder Joe Wilhoit of the Braves, who has been on the disabled list for the past week, is in Boston awaiting the return of his team mates Wednesday. Brooklyn and Philadelphia are the teams the Braves will meet in their coming stand on the Allston green.

Gaelic Football Teams Clash for Title

Celtic Boston is vitally interested in the outcome of the carnival of Gaelic sports that will be held under the auspices of Division 73, A. O. H., at the South End Grounds, July 4, but more especially in the football match between the representatives of Counties Cork and Tipperary.

The Tipperary-Cork game will decide the Gaelic football championship of New England and thousands of dollars have been wagered on the result. Since Cork defeated Kerry on April 19, and Tipperary beat Galway May 30, reversing the result of the Patriots' day game, the winner of the July 4 game will have a clear claim to the title.

In addition to the championship match, Galway and Kerry and Limerick and Napper Tandy will meet at football, and the five hurling matches will bring together the Wolf Tones of South Boston and the Emmets of Charlestown, the Redmonds of Boston and the Shamrocks of South Boston, while the Young Irelands of Cambridge will try conclusions with the winner of the Emmets-Wolf Tones match.

The winner of the invitation twelve-mile amateur run may rightfully be hailed as the modified Marathon champion of New England, for among the starters will be Jimmy Henigan, New England cross-country champion; Arthur V. Roth, winner of the B. A. A. Marathon; Le Roy Davis of Lowell, winner of the American Day Marathon in New York; William Brown of Quincy, who finished fifth in the B. A. A. race, and Fred Nagle and Fred Faller, two of the best of the local ten-milers.

$35, $40, $45, $50 SUITINGS

Mr. Reader, if some day you wake up and read in the paper how MITCHELL THE TAILOR has bought out your favorite tailor, the man who charged you $50 or $60 for a suit of clothes, I want you to weigh well this fact—That his merchandise does not depreciate one iota in the removal from his high-priced tailoring establishment to my store, where prices are less than one-third. Mr. Brown's goods were considered good value at an average of $45 a suit. They are extremely good value in my store at a price of $18.50. With due respect to the high-priced tailors in Boston, I don't believe there is one of them who, in his own mind, thinks he can cut a suit with the character and style that Mr. Macdonald imparts in his clothing. There isn't a tailor in Boston who has the variety of woolens that can be found in my establishment, and no tailor, at any price, carries better merchandise.

I buy out the entire stock of Geo. W. Brown, woolens, Skinner's silk and satin, Belgian canvas, fine linings, etc., who has been located for the last thirty years in the Studio Building, 110 Tremont St., Boston. This stock of woolens comprises as choice a line of goods, with as great a variety, as any tailor in Boston could boast of. Mr. Brown was a keen business man, and, if his woolens are any criterion, a man of great cloth intelligence. The great bulk of this stock was purchased through the commission house of William S. Leonard, whose cloths can be found in no tailor's shop who sells goods under $35 for a suit, and I offer you a range of worsteds with the original William S. Leonard tickets on them, at a price,

Three-Piece SUIT to Order $15.50

These cloths were never put in a suit by Mr. Brown to sell under $35, and from that up to $50. I show you the original tickets of Macullar, Parker Co., Roddis, Arnold & Hollander, Jackson & Co., the original tickets of Lippincott, Johnson & Co.; Wain, Shiell & Sons, a fine London concern, and other houses of similar character.

This stock is mostly confined styles, nearly all London Shrunk, and of a quality that no man can question the value. It comprises a variety of merchandise that is never used in suits to sell under $40-$45-$50, and I today advertise them and advise my old customers to get in early on the purchase so they can pick out as many styles as they choose.

Three-Piece SUIT to Order $15.50

From what information I can gather, Mr. Brown did not intend to retire at this season, and I am given to understand that most of the heavyweights in this range are next Fall's goods. There are no new patterns, everything clean staple effects, Blue Cheviots, Blue Serges, Gray Unfinished Worsteds, neat quiet Sharkskin weaves, Tartan Plaids, Tartan Checks, and a general variety of everything that would constitute a merchant tailor's stock.

If you were a tailor it would be hardly possible for you to get the suit pattern for the price I am charging for a suit made to fit or new suit made. I will line these goods with a fine sleeve lining. They will be cut under the eye of the highest salaried designer of custom clothing in the country today, made by union help, under union conditions, in sanitary shops.

I would be pleased to have every reader of this paper call and get sample for inspection.

Signed, MITCHELL THE TAILOR.

Vera Sheldon at Sixteen Has Her First Romance

"Professor Hazen told me to call him De Witt."

By ANN LISLE.

Copyright, 1916, International News Service

I was nineteen when I stopped fearing my father and began to hate him.

Before that happened a great deal of water had passed under the bridge that spanned the banks of my life from an unhappy childhood to a reckless girlhood.

I learned early in life to shrink from my father. He was a stern, austere man, who issued orders in a cold, low tone. But if those orders were not obeyed his pale face reddened and his voice fairly boomed. He seemed to expand and become a giant when he was angry.

My brothers, Rex and Leonard, were whipped when they were disobedient; but there was a different penalty for my naughtiness. I was shut in the dark entry to our old cellar. I came to wonder why father knew what tortures I suffered as I waited there in the blackness.

When I was sixteen I had my first romance!

My romance was not one of those boy and girl affairs, half-shamefaced, half-triumphant, which flourished in our country. A grown man—a college graduate—cared for unpopular, neglected little me.

Father never permitted us to have any company. He thought children ought to attend to their work and help their parents, and not waste their time on nonsense.

ASSURED SHE WAS PRETTY

My invalid mother and my mirror united to assure me that I was pretty—tall and slim, tawny of hair and dusky of eye, with white skin, stained to rose across the high cheekbones. I resented my nose—it had a "quirk" in it, and my mouth, wide and crimson lipped, I despised. Later I was told that my mouth made a merely pretty girl beautiful and that the irregularity of my nose gave my face piquancy and charm.

At 4 o'clock every afternoon father telephoned to see if we had all come home from school and were working. Each of us had to go to the telephone and report. As free the phone call Rex would rush down to the athletic field and practice for the team. He was a wonderfully handsome boy—tall and magnificently built, with a deep chest and slender hips of a born athlete.

I adored him and got a certain happiness in my pride because he had made "baseball," "the track," and "the crew." But when father discovered what Rex was doing he was kept out of school for a week.

Rex made up his studies, but he never recovered his place in the school world. The boys despised him for not being man enough to "stand up" to his father, and the girls gave him a sort of scornful pity. Rex resented the attitude of the other children. He suffered terrible and his suffering warped his splendid nature sadly.

Rex and I were friends and companions as well as brother and sister. A wonderful love and tenderness apsang up between us through the suffering we shared in our ostracism. Leo was a student. His books satisfied him. He didn't mind when we were put down as queer and avoided.

THE CRUELTY OF CHILDREN

Children are cruel, unconsciously but thoroughly cruel to each other. Our classmates whispered and nudged each other whenever we passed. No one ever invited us to their parties after my freshman year in high school. Father stalked into the ground on the day of the senior strawberry festival and fairly dragged us home. The story of Rex's punishment had made them all despise us; but after the strawberry festival we were a laughing stock. That was worse.

We had the largest herds of Shorthrooke and we were the best dressed children in town. But we never had any money.

I resented my position bitterly. Our schoolmate, Nellie, told me that everyone in town said I was pretty than my cousin Corinne or Flora Holmes or even Mildred Francis, the beauty of the senior class. I watched the rightful tributes to my youth and beauty. I used to tremble with a strange, untamed feeling when I saw Norton Gregory helping my cousin Corinne over the outside seat, his hand curved around her bare forearm.

I told mother about it—but she said I must not think of such things; it wasn't nice; girls didn't talk that way. I wondered about it for years—and then she said nothing. Not for words would I have bothered Rex; and Rex was working his way through the State university; he seemed out of my life—as dear, old, like father.

So I shut my turbulent feelings into my own heart, and they fed on what they found there.

Then when I was sixteen a man looked at me as I had seen Norton Gregory looking at Corinne. It was my first romance. I knew now that I was flattered rather than stirred. I was a junior in high school, and a title over sixteen whose Professor Hazen, newly graduated from Princeton, came to take charge of the history department.

He didn't know that Vera Sheldon was "queer" and different. He treated me as if I were like all the other girls—only superior. He praised my history recitations, and I studied harder and harder for his praise. Everyone thought I was trying to win the junior history prize—a $20 gold piece. I had forgotten all about the prize. I was working for Professor Hazen.

AN ATTENTIVE CALLER

He used to stop me in the hallways and talk to me; once or twice he waited for me and carried my books home after school. At Christmas time he sent me a lovely card with a bunch of holly embossed in one corner and a star in the other. Across it he had written in his funny, scrawly hand, "To my star pupil, De Witt B. Hazen."

Father always opened our mail. He seemed rather proud of that card from Professor Hazen and distinctly pleased over the fact that I had been called a star pupil.

He gave me a five-dollar gold piece for Christmas and told me to buy some history books and a box of candy. Heretofore our Christmas and birthday gifts had always been an addition to the twenty-five dollars added to the bank accounts father was keeping for each of his children.

Once or twice between Christmas and Easter Professor Hazen was invited to our house for Sunday tea. No one else excepting father's business friends and my cousins had ever come. After tea father and Professor Hazen used to argue about the reconstruction period of American history or the birth of the Republican party, or some such dry subject.

One day in the late Spring Professor Hazen walked home and asked if he might stay a while. Mother was lying down in the back sitting room and I was out in the university trying some chemistry experiment. Rex was somewhere in the house, as I told the Professor. But he said he just wanted to visit with me. We sat alone back of the screen of vines and talked—and soon he was asking me to call him De Witt and telling me that he was only twenty-four—not such an old man that "sweet sixteen" had to be afraid of him.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

In the Train

One hears some stories, tall and short, interesting and otherwise, while traveling by train.

One evening several miners entered a smoking car and immediately opened conversation with an elderly gentleman, who told them of a glaring miscarriage of justice in connection with a police-court case in which he was greatly interested.

Then one of the miners chimed in. He said he knew a man who was sentenced to three months' hard labor for picking up a rope.

His friends ridiculed the statement, but the narrator stuck to his words.

"Perhaps he was an 'old hand,'" suggested the elderly gentleman.

"No, he wasn't," persisted the miner. "In fact, he was never in a police-court before."

"What kind of rope was it, then?" "Usual sort — about six yards long."

Still the company was unconvinced. The train stopped at a station, and the miner made towards the door. Then he turned and added, significantly:

"You see, the magistrate happened to find out that there was a horse at the end of the rope!"

Bait

"Say, Jim," said the friend of the taxi-cab driver, standing in front of the vehicle, "there's a purse lying on the floor of your cab."

The driver looked carefully around, and then whispered:

"Sometimes when business is bad I put it there and leave the door open. It's empty, but you've no idea how many people'll jump in for a short drive when they see it."

The Struggles of a Wife

Myra Collapses Under the Strain Following a Terrible Dream.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER LI.

Copyright, 1916, Star Company.

Horace Webb ate his dinner in silence. From time to time his wife addressed some remark to him, forcing herself to speak naturally. But he answered briefly and absent-mindedly.

Myra knew that he was thinking of what he told her twenty-four hours ago the facts that she had been trying to realize ever since then—that he was actually once more square with the world, and that after this "things would be easier."

When dinner was over he called her into the library and closed the door.

"We had a directors' meeting today," he said quietly. "It is just as I told you last night, Myra. We are surely on the upgrade now. Every back debt is paid. Our hard times are over."

She wanted to throw herself into his arms, to kiss him, to cry out her weariness. But instead she looked into his unmoved face and spoke calmly.

"I am glad," she said.

"I know you are," he rejoined.

Then, as he wheeled around to his table and began to open the letters that lay there, she turned to leave the room.

"I think I will go to bed," she faltered. "I am tired."

"Yes, go to bed," he advised gently.

The thought flashed into her mind that his voice was suddenly husky, but of course she was mistaken. Even such a time of relief as this would not shake him from his grave reserve.

She staggered slightly as she went down the hall. She wondered what made her head feel so queer.

Grace's door was open, and the mother paused to say good night.

"Henry can't come tonight," Grace remarked, "and he has sent me this book to keep me from missing him too much."

ALL SELF—SELF

She smiled as she spoke. How secure and contented the child was. Myra mused as she went on into her own room and got ready for bed. Now that Grace had Henry to care for her, all was well. The mother was really necessary to nobody. Of course there was Horace—but Horace did not need her any longer.

Although she undressed and lay down, she did not sink into unbroken slumber until long after her husband had gone to his own bed on the other side of the room. She did not speak to him, for she felt too weak to try to speak.

In the darkness she was reviewing the struggles of the past two years—how she had worked and planned to keep people from knowing how hard pressed she and Horace were, how she had lived and acted as if there had not been with her all the time the dread of the wolf at the door—and worse still, the terror lest others should suspect that he was there.

It was towards dawn before profound sleep came to her, and she dreamed then.

She dreamed that she was living in a hut in a forest, and as dusk fell she could see from the windows a huge wolf prowling near her little home. Her friends came to visit her often, and she knew that if they suspected the wolf was there they would desert her in fear and, worst of all, would despise Horace.

She could not tell him of her anguished anxiety, because he did not like her to talk much of such matters. She tried to keep from glancing out of the window lest her companions, too, might look that way and see what she saw.

Each night the wolf came nearer, and she could hear his growls; she laughed and talked loudly so that others might not hear them.

At one night it was cruelly cold, and she shivered so that she could scarcely talk. Her guests looked at her strangely, and she fancied that they heard the sounds she was trying to drown.

She moved nearer the door, for the rustle of the wolf's feet in the dead leaves was just outside now.

Then she knew that he was pressing against the door, and she leaned her own body hard against the panels. But she felt the wood yielding to the creature's weight.

A TERRIBLE DREAM

"How strong the wind is!" she exclaimed, laughing shrilly as she tried to hold the door shut.

She was answered by a howl from without, and she laughed again in high peals that seemed to fill the room. But, loud as her voice was, and hard as she pressed against the door, the wolf pressed harder. She saw her friends' aghast faces, saw them stare in horror at her, then the door gave way, and the huge beast sprang straight at her throat.

As his fangs sank into her flesh she had a fierce sense of joy that now everybody knew the truth, that now she need no longer pretend with an agony of pretence; she could let herself go, the worst had come.

"Thank heaven!" she heard herself scream. "It's all over!"

She awoke caught in her windpipe, gurgling and rattling there, as was strangling—sinking into a black gulf.

With a smothered cry, she tore herself free from the horrible nightmare and sat up in bed, the perspiration pouring down her face. Out of the darkness surrounding her her husband was speaking.

"Myra?" he was saying. "You are dreaming! Wake up, my dear!"

"I am awake now!" she quavered. "I have had a fearful dream!"

"Never mind," Horace soothed. "Don't talk about it. Try to forget it."

But she could not forget, and she could not sleep.

Yet when the clock struck seven she got up, as usual, took her bath, and slipping into a kimono, came back into the bedroom, and woke her husband. Then she began combing her hair in front of the mirror. From where he lay in bed Horace saw her face reflected in the glass, and her pallor and wide eyes caught his attention.

"Why, Myra!" he exclaimed. "How pale you are! What's the matter?"

She started violently, then turned and faced him, holding to the edge of the dressing-table for support. He sprang toward her.

"Myra!" she stammered—"I am dead tired!"

Then, with a little gasp, she sank to the floor at his feet.

Repartee

The repartee of the London cockney cab driver may not be so thin blooded as that of her male counterpart, but its rapier-like qualities are decidedly more effective.

"Allow, Kitty," shouted a jovial carman to one of the fare ladies one chilly morning recently. "Feel. 'ot cold, old dear? Why don't yer turn yer collar up like me?"

"Well, you see," sweetly replied the girl, "I've got a clean neck."

In Our Wonderful World

It is common enough to see a boy watching crabs to keep them from straying, and in days not so very long by it was no unusual thing for a boy to be set to keep the birds off the crops. But a watch-boy whose duty it is to keep a look-out for a school of fish, and who sits in a sentry-box set upon stilts, is not such an everyday sight.

This particular kind of watch-boy is Norwegian, the scene of his labors being the shores of some fjord of his native land.

His little sentry-box is made of wood, and perched high upon posts. Here the lad sits, gazing out across the arm of the sea, using his keen eyes for the benefit of the farmers who are depending upon him to give the alarm when a school of fish shall appear. They work contentedly enough in their fields, secure in the belief that their watch-boy will let them know when it is time to reap a harvest from the sea, instead of from the land.

When the signal is given they leave their work, throw their big nets over their shoulders and hurry off to the boats.

Sentinel boxes similar to those employed in Norway were in use among the fishermen on the coasts of the Mediterranean, and it is supposed that the Vikings brought back with them from some of their piratical raids the idea that has been put in practice ever since.

One of the busiest railway centres in Western Australia at present is Spencer's Brook, some sixty miles from Fremantle. Nearly 750,000 bushels of wheat, worth approximately $915,000, is passing through this junction on its way to the seaboard every week. This enormous quantity is being handled without working overtime or on Sundays, and without putting any special strain upon the resources of the railway department. Some fifteen trains of 2,270 tons of wheat are dealt with every day. This represents 125,000 bushels per day.

So complete are the arrangements for the traffic that there is no danger of any ship arriving at Fremantle and not being able to load her wheat. Large quantities of wheat are also being handled at the ports of Albany, Bunbury and Geraldton.

Queen Elizabeth was the first English monarch to realize the value of the coal mines as a State-owned monopoly. She obtained a lease of all the Durham fields for $400 a year, and then proceeded to manipulate a corner in coals with much success. She annexed the private pits of the Percys when they were profitably developing themselves, and only consented after a time to allow them a small percentage on their own stuff. She chartered a company in Newcastle as virtual monopolists in the sale of Northumbrian coal to shippers, and so engineered matters that the Lord Mayor of London formally complained that the Newcastle freemen's rights had been bartered away to a monopoly, and begged for some limitation to the price, which had now been forced up to $5 a chaldron. Coal had previously been sold in London at $1 a chaldron.

GREAT CHANGE IN HER CONDITION

Boston Lady Relates How Plant Juice Cured Her of Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

Many people suffering from a deranged stomach, liver, kidney or intestinal trouble have different symptoms. In fact, no one symptom following may designate these complaints. Constipation, headaches, heartburn, costiveness, palpitation of the heart, no breath, foul mouth, coated tongue, a coated tongue, dark circles under the eyes, indigestion, dyspepsia.

MRS. NELLIE BECKWITH.

Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach remedy, attacks and destroys all poisons in the blood, corrects disease conditions, tones, purifies and cleans kidneys and restores them to normal condition, thereby forcing them to perform their proper functions.

Recently Mrs. Nellie Beckwith, well-known Boston lady, who resides at No. 34 Shirley Street, gave the following:

"I suffered from indigestion and dyspepsia for several years. I could eat any solid food, such as meat or vegetables, as it fermented in my stomach and caused gas to form there, which gave me the most awful agony. I had such headaches and my liver was torpid and sluggish, which caused me to become so dizzy that at times I would have to hold on to the furniture to keep my balance. I was so nervous I would tremble all over, and could not get any sleep at night; the least little thing would upset me. I had given up all hope of ever getting any better, as I had tried so many different medicines without any benefit whatever. I read in the paper how your Plant Juice was curing many people, so I started to take it myself. I am now happy to state publicly that I am completely cured, sleep fine and all the nervousness is gone. I can eat anything and digest it and never feel better in my life."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

Good Housekeeping Recipes

Good food properly cooked goes far toward insuring health and long years. As much depends on the cooking, however, as on the food itself. The following recipes have been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute, conducted by GOOD HOUSEKEEPING, and are republished here by special arrangement with that publication, the Nation's Greatest Home Magazine.

All measurements are level, standard half-pint measuring cups, tablespoons, and teaspoons being used. Sixteen level tablespoonfuls equal a half-pint. Quantities are sufficient for six people unless otherwise stated. Flour is sifted once before measuring.

Blackberry Jelly

1 quart blackberries
1 lemon
1 cupful sugar
1¼ tablespoonfuls granulated gelatin
Water

Wash berries carefully, crush, and put in a saucepan with the sugar, allowing them to simmer for twenty minutes to draw out the juices. Rub through a fine sieve; add the juice of the whole lemon and the grated rind of half. Add enough water to make three cupfuls of liquid, heat but do not boil, and stir in the gelatin, which should be previously soaked in two-thirds cupful of cold water. Pour into individual molds, let stand till the next day and serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Grape, Plum, Cherry Conserve

6 pints drained fruit
2 pounds seeded raisins
8 cupfuls granulated sugar
4 oranges
1 cupful English walnuts

Grate the orange-peel and extract the orange-juice. Chop the raisins and nuts together, combine all ingredients, and cook gently for forty minutes. This will make twelve glasses.

Fable of Two Maidens

Once there were two maidens who sought to catch a nice young man. And it was a fair start in the eyes of the undiscerning, for the one was exceedingly fair to look upon and dressed stylishly, while the other was plain of countenance.

The pretty girl smiled sweetly on the nice young man, and talked to him, till she dazzled him with her beauty and charmed him with her wit. The plain one gazed wonderingly at him, and made him talk to her of divers things, while she listened, entranced at his wisdom and learning.

He took the pretty girl out riding, to the theatre, and bought her chocolates and flowers, and all the knowing ones said she had struck a winner, when one day he married the plain girl, and took her to California for their honeymoon.

The pretty girl had made him very much pleased with her, but the plain girl had gone one better and made him very much more pleased with himself.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

YOU ARE WRONG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-four years old and for eight months have been going out to theatres and balls with the young lady I hoped to marry. When I asked her about it she seemed to think I should be pleased, but I can't see it in that light. I have come to the conclusion of giving her up.

Do you think I am right?

FRANK.

DON'T yield to jealousy. After all there is no reason why the girl you love should sit around and do nothing during the eight months of your absence. And the fact that neither she nor your brothers meant any disloyalty is shown by the fact that they frankly discussed their actions with you.

A GIRL'S TROUSSEAU

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you be so kind as to advise me as to the trousseau for a girl in ordinary circumstances? I am engaged to be married. Living at home and in ordinary circumstances.

PHIL.

A trousseau of a girl in ordinary circumstances might consist of half a dozen pieces of the larger household linens and a dozen of the small, though, of course, it would be better if she could double the amount so that things would not have to be laundered so often. The same thing applies to personal linens. As for dresses, a suit and change of waists, one or two simple morning dresses, a silk afternoon dress, a simple evening gown and an extra coat will serve nicely.

ORGANIZE TO AID SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

The Citizens' Patriotic Committee, appointed by Governor McCall to raise a fund of not less than $250,000 for the care of dependent families of soldiers, today met in the Council Chamber at the State House and organized under the name of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association, the same as that used during the Spanish-American War.

About twenty-five members were present. George H. Lyman was elected chairman, George C. Lee of Lee, Higginson Company treasurer and former Postmaster E. C. Mansfield secretary. Governor McCall was chosen honorary president.

Governor McCall, in opening the meeting, declared it was a duty not only to look after the needs of soldiers' families, but of the soldiers themselves. He said, in part:

PRIVILEGE TO ASSIST.

"Many of the men who have enlisted have been receiving salaries and wages very much larger than their pay from the government. They are making this sacrifice in order to serve their country.

"It is the duty of those who are at home to do their share, and there is a general willingness everywhere to see to it that no hardship shall come to any family by reason of the departure of the wage-earners to the front.

"It was a matter of duty for you to protect the families against hardships. But 'duty' sounds cold. We should also insist upon it as a right.

"It will be better to raise too much money rather than too little, because it can easily be used wisely. For instance, I am told that the soldiers do not receive tobacco from the government. Our men who go possibly to Mexico would feel very much the lack of tobacco. Other things can also be furnished them from home which will make them more comfortable.

"The formation of this committee will be an example to the other states of the union."

APPEAL TO EMPLOYERS.

At the suggestion of President Lowell of Harvard, and subject to the approval of the Governor, a resolution was adopted to have the $16,000 unexpended balance of the Massachusetts Volunteer Association of 1898 transferred to the new association. An order of the court will be necessary.

Mayor Curley suggested, and the association voted to issue an appeal to all business houses in the State to grant their employes leave of absence without loss of pay while serving in the militia.

The association also voted to request all organizations now formed or all organizations that may be formed to make the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association the clearing house of all funds collected.

Adjutant-General Cole urged the association to get down to business as quickly as possible to care for the families that needed relief immediately. An executive committee of seven members, three of whom will be the officers elected, will be appointed to supervise the work.

WOMEN AID WORK.

Others present at the meeting were A. P. Cristy of Worcester, J. C. Joseph Flamand of Cambridge, Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Major Henry L. Higginson, Richard Hooker of Springfield, Charles Pfaff, James J. Phelan, Frederick Prince, A. C. Ratchesky, Mrs. George T. Rice of Dedham, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Charles H. Taylor, Robert M. Burnett of Southboro and Robert Winsor.

Prior to the meeting at the State House, society women, headed by Mrs. John Balch of Brookline, met at the Commonwealth armory to organize a relief society to assist dependent wives and children of soldiers.

Mrs. Balch was kept busy in her special room at the armory taking the names of families needing help.

Associated with her in the work are: Mrs. Evelyn Sears, Mrs. H. L. Robinson, Mrs. G. B. Gulick, Mrs. Mary Batchelder, Mrs. Edmund Bridge, Mrs. Carleton Rowe, Mrs. Sydney Parsons and Mrs. William Hardy.

Mrs. Balch has planned the following card for applicants.

Name .....
Address .....
Soldier's name .....
Business employment .....
Military employment .....
Income per week, preceding mobilization .....
Present income, per week .....
Church .....
Benefit societies .....
Relatives who can help .....
Number dependent on wage earner .....
References .....

MUST HELP READY.

Referring to her work, Mrs. Balch said:

"We are not fairly started as yet, but we hope to grasp the situation of the dependants. Many of us have helped the warring countries of Europe through the Red Cross, and now we want to be of service to our country in the present emergency.

"We hope to have this department of looking after the dependants in good working order in a short time.

"My special duty is not to raise the money, but to have a systematic list of all those who have mobilized and whose families will be affected by it by a reduction of income."

One special pathetic case came to the attention of Mrs. Balch today when Thomas F. Nolan said that his son, Thomas F. Nolan, Jr., twenty-three, of No. 525 Sixth street, South Boston, had enlisted and left behind him a young wife and three small children without any settled support.

WOMEN GIVE AID.

Mrs. Balch became interested in the case. Nolan has enlisted in the Field Hospital, No. 1, M. V. M. as a corporal, and his father urges that he be discharged from service.

Women were very enthusiastic today at the armory to be of service.

Mrs. Annie Spear Pear of 31 Boston, said:

"Send me anyway to be of service to my country. I can do something even in Mexico. Every woman should get busy and think of something that she can do. A little done every day will amount to so much in the aggregate."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, there having been no rally of consequence during the morning, when trading was of fair volume only. Reading was the weakest railroad. Greene-Cananea the weakest copper. Willys-Overland the weakest motor, and Industrial Alcohol the weakest munitions issue. Other Products common had continued to sag. Mexican stocks reflected the border crisis. Zincs failed to hold gains.

Declines at 12 o'clock included Corn Products common ¾, Beet common 1, American Can 1⅛, United States Steel ⅜, Anaconda ⅜, Greene-Cananea 2⅛, Kennecott ¼, Butte & Superior 1⅛, American Locomotive ⅛, Baldwin 1½, Crucible 2¼, Industrial Alcohol 2¼, Texas Co 3, Mexican Petroleum 2⅜, Maxwell 1, Studebaker 1, Chandler 1⅛, Willys-Overland 2½, Marine preferred 1¼, Canadian Pacific 1, Southern Pacific ⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio 1, Reading ⅜, Lehigh Valley ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio ¼, Union Pacific ½, American Smelting 1⅛, and U. S. Smelting 2¼.

Tennessee Copper was up 1.

The Boston market was a shade stronger than New York by comparison, but the majority of local issues declined, including Atlantic, West Indies & Gulf common.

Declines included Greene-Cananea 2, United Shoe ¼, United Fruit 1, American Zinc ¾, Gulf common ¼, and U. S. Smelting 2¼.

Among gains were Gulf preferred ¼, Alaska Gold ¼, Butte & Superior ¼, Lake, Shannon & Osceola ¼, Arizona ¼, North Butte ¼ and Quincy ¼.

Irregularity prevailed in New York at the opening with the tendency downward. Price changes averaged small. The market was quiet. Sentiment was unaltered. There was much selling pressure. The demand for stocks was light. Room traders were bearish. Interest in the offered ten Corn Products because of the court order that this trust shall dissolve. Corn Products shares were offered in quantity. Preferred dropped ten points before rallying. Coppers were active. At the end of the first hour quotations ranged lower. American Smelting, Mexican Petroleum, Reading, Studebaker and Industrial Alcohol were among the weakest issues. The Mexican situation was about the only thing that inspired interest.

The Boston market began dull and narrow, but with a stronger tone than at the week-end. Atlantic Gulf and West Indies common was about the only issue to show any interest in trading. It advanced. The market grew stronger during the first hour.

In the Boston metal market spot copper advanced 64 and futures ⅛. Wire, electrolytic and casting. Spot quotations were ⅛ lower. Spot lead was up 5s; futures were off 3s. Spot spelter was unchanged and futures ⅛ lower.

PUBLIC SERVICE

A Word to Those Who Have Not Yet Been Converted to a Belief in Public Ownership

THERE are three classes of citizens who oppose public ownership of the railroads and other public service corporations. First, of great power, but insignificant in numbers, are those who directly profit by the private ownership and private mismanagement of these corporations. With them argument will always be useless. Facts will never count.

Then there is a second group, large in numbers, but the least in influence, the timid, inert souls who think that the proposition is VERY radical and think it is not "good form" to be VERY radical and think that it is not even good form to learn whether in fact the proposition is, in view of world conditions, very radical. These people do not know that nearly all the great and progressive nations of the western world have now acquired their railroads, telephones and telegraph companies, and that all the progressive peoples of the eastern world, Japan, Australia and New Zealand, have done likewise. They do not know that in this respect America lags behind with China and the revolutionary peoples of South America and the most backward little nations of Europe.

The third group of citizens, larger in number than the first or the second, but too intelligent to be governed by any notion of what is "good form" in opinions and quite disinterested with respect to the enormous corruption profits which are the constant attendant of private management of these public service corporations, are yet unconvinced of the wisdom of public ownership. These men and women represent in a large part the professional classes, who have given the matter only cursory attention, who deplore the corruption and mismanagement and chicane of the private managers of the public service corporations, but who think that it might be as bad under public operation and who have, as a determining factor against public ownership, an old prejudice against the extension of the public functions.

That prejudice is best expressed in the old phrase that the "people is the best governed which is the least governed."

The great leaders of the political and economic thought a century ago propounded this theory of government, both as a political and an economic doctrine. But men deduce their theories from conditions of their immediate experience. They are apt to dogmatize on the dangers which have been the most recent to them.

The public men and economists of a hundred years ago lived in a world which was just emerging from a struggle with overweening monarchial and aristocratic power. This power was exercised for the benefit of the few and at the expense of the many. This power harried them by all kinds of governmental interferences and exactions—conceived and enforced not for the benefit of the people, but for the benefit of the governing classes—the royal family, the nobility and the publicans to whom royal favor granted special privileges and monopolies. Every governmental interference in trade was for the special advantage of some individual or small class at the expense of the general welfare. Every extension of the governmental power and function was at the expense of the people's power and to multiply the means of extortionate taxation upon the country.

When the opponents of these wrongs came to formulate their opposition into a political and economic theory, it was natural for them to declare that the less government we had, the less the government attempted to do, the better for the general public. They did not then see that the evil lay in the class which controlled the government and exercised its power for their own special advantage and not in the inherent evil of extending the functions of the government. In those days the control of the government by royalty and its nobility was by inheritance, so that any extension in the power of the government meant an increase in the power of this privileged class.

All this is reversed today. We still have a governing class who exploit us no less unscrupulously than the old monarchies. But there is this very fundamental difference in the situation. Under the old monarchies every extension of the government's business was necessarily an increase in the power of the hereditary governing and exploiting classes. Today every extension of the government's business means the commensurate restriction of the power of our governing class to exploit us, for OUR governing class obtains and exercises its power over the government and its consequent power to exploit us from the PUBLIC functions which in its PRIVATE capacity it is permitted to exercise.

Organized money power in this country today exists through the instrumentalities of the railroads, the street railways, the gas and electric light companies, the telephone and telegraph companies and all the other public service corporations controlled by private individuals and performing a public function. Nine-tenths of the great private fortunes which threaten the stability of our democratic republic have been made out of the dishonest mismanagement of these public service companies, pilfering both the public and the stockholders.

When the government assumes its natural functions by taking control of these public service corporations, the political power of those who now control them will cease. There will be petty graft in their public management as there is NOW petty graft in their PRIVATE management. But there will cease to be enormous, princely graft, graft in the tens of millions, which enables the stupendous grafter to found a "family" to achieve social distinction, to be regarded as a successful man, respected, admired, imitated, consulted.

The grafter under public ownership will go to jail when he is caught. His life will be counted a failure, a warning.

Even the big political bosses, not directly connected with these public service companies, will find their big graft and their power fading, for they are as much a part of the exploiting organizations of these companies as their managers themselves. The sinews of war for their political organizations come from the financial interests in the public companies, and is only the bosses' division of the spoils, of which by far the greater part goes to those whose connection with the corporations is more direct.

So, while formerly any extension of the functions of the government meant the extension of the exploiting power of an hereditary privileged class, today such an extension takes away from "big business," our twentieth century privileged class, the means by which it maintains its privileges and extorts its dangerous gains, by taking away from it the control of the public service corporations.

Therefore, those who in the eighteenth century were fighting the extension of the government's activities, because they were fighting against special privilege and its long train of abuses and dangers to the common weal, would today be fighting for public ownership of these public service corporations—and for the same reasons that led them to oppose any further extension of the government's program in the old days.

"SOLDIER BOY, ONE KISS BEFORE YOU GO"

Copyright, 1916, by International News Service.

A hundred thousand or more homes are giving some loved one to rush to the Mexican border. For every lad that has donned the khaki there is a tear-dimmed mother, sister, sweetheart or wife to bid him a fond adieu—there is a broken-hearted woman.

Winsor McCay, the famous cartoonist, heard the boys singing a song which inspired him to make this cartoon. He says the song is a fitting farewell for the soldier lads. The song is called "Soldier Boy." The words are:

You're a man that's brave and true, soldier boy,
And I'm mighty proud of you, soldier boy,
When the bugle call so clear called for men you answered
"Here!" with a voice so full of cheer, soldier boy!

Chorus.

Soldier boy, one kiss before you go.
Soldier boy, I'll miss you, that you know.
Ev'ry night I'll pray for you far away,
And trust to Him above to send you back some day;
In my heart a love will always yearn,
And I'll wait for your return.
So go and fight for the cause you know is right.
God bless you, my soldier boy!

The song is both sad and inspiring, and it made everyone who heard it do a lot of thinking about how readily the National Guard had dropped the peace and comfort of their daily lives in response to the President's call for help for the regular army.

Steel Caps in Modern Warfare

Curious Resemblances Between the "Iron Pots" Worn by the Ancient Knights and Those Now Employed by the Soldiers of Europe—Helmet Styles Have Not Changed.

By Garrett P. Serviss

ONE of the most interesting consequences of the altered method of warfare as it is now exemplified on the western battle line in Europe is the revival of ancient and medieval armor for the heads of the combatants. How closely these "iron pots," which have now become steel pots, without much change of form, resemble the old-time headgear of battle may be clearly shown by comparing them with specimens dating from the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

It is evident that the old makers of these things had covered the ground so completely that virtually nothing was left to be added when twentieth century armor makers were so suddenly called upon to enter the same field of invention. As far as general shape was concerned the latter found nothing to invent; they had only to go to a military museum and imitate what they found there.

In one respect only do the modern helmets have any noticeable advantage over their ancient predecessors, and that is in the superiority of the metal of which they are composed. We have learned how to make steel more resistant than the iron and imperfect steel formerly used, and possibly something may be saved in weight. But at the same time the blows dealt by modern weapons are harder and more penetrating.

Armor of Ancients Would Be More Burden Than Protection Now

So true is this that armor for the whole body, such as the knights of old wore, would be far more of an encumbrance than a protection in these days. It is only the head that can be effectually shielded, and that because in the deep trenches now used high-powered projectiles cannot directly reach their aim.

Shrapnel and hand-bombs are the weapons employed, and the fragments shot down into the trenches from their explosions do not possess a momentum too great to prevent their being warded off by a steel helmet, especially when, as must most commonly happen, the blow dealt is a slanting one.

The older helmets were intended principally to resist blows from swords and battle-axes, but the change in the nature of the attack has produced no essential alteration in the form of the shield. Even the projecting rim at the base of the pot covering the head retains about the same shape and proportion for the protection of the face, the neck and the shoulders.

One of the 1915 models has no rim at all, so that it can afford no protection except to the skull. This is probably designed to save weight, but the other forms, which have rims, look as if they would be more effective, while the increase of weight cannot be very serious. Inasmuch as no projectile can reach soldiers hidden in a narrow trench unless it descends in an almost vertical line from above, it would seem as if the addition of side wings a little wider would complete the protection by guarding the shoulders.

Helmet Becomes a Target When Wearer Peers Over Parapet

But, of course, the soldier does not remain continually at the bottom of his trench. He must also place himself at the parapet, where he can see and shoot at the enemy, and here his helmet may be the target for more direct blows from projectiles coming nearly horizontally. In such cases he may be so protected by the walls and shields of the trench that hardly any more of his person is exposed than a narrow horizontal strip of his face, including the eyes. The top of the head, which would otherwise be a fatal mark, is more or less effectually shielded by the helmet.

It is not improbable that other forms of personal armor will be developed, such as shields for the heart and other vital organs. This is rendered possible by the diminutive size of modern rifle projectiles. They may pass directly through the body in various directions without inflicting a mortal wound, provided that they are deflected aside from certain organs.

Fact and Feeling

By C. F. Thwing

President Western Reserve University

MODERN life is concerned with the Fact. Modern education is likewise concerned with the Fact. Information is to be accurate. The interpretation of the information is to be sound, its understanding exact.

Education seeks to make instruction full, knowledge complete, scholarship precise. The fact is what can be weighed, assessed, exactly estimated. Its symbol is the scale, the yardstick. It stands for the outer sense and the inner judgment.

But man has feeling as well as knowledge, a sense of beauty as well as wisdom. Feeling rules when a man stands for the first time within the Cathedral of Chartres, or hears for the hundredth time his beloved oratorio, or sits in worship before the Sistine Madonna in the Dresden Gallery, or climbs the broken steps that lead to the Parthenon, or pauses before the monument at Cawnpore, or kneels at the grave of Lawrence at Lucknow, or looks at Saint Gaudens' statue of Abraham Lincoln in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

What is man in life's crises as the birth of his first child or the death of his mother?

Feeling is the emotion of the conscience. Feeling translates what is merely technical and formal into sympathies. Feeling is the atmosphere which transmutes prose into literature, verse into song, and the walks of humanity along the commonplace road into triumphal marches.

Feeling plus oratory is eloquence; feeling plus talent genius; feeling plus affection love.

Between action and feeling man forever moves as the oscillating pendulum. At times fact is stronger and civilization passes into peril of becoming formal, cold, exact, marble-like.

At times feeling is stronger and civilization becomes effusive, riotous, ornamental, sentimental, decorative. Of each quality civilization should partake. The fact should be observed as a fact, but it should also be bathed in emotion. Emotion should have wings, but it should have as its support a fact.

Left to itself it is as helpless as the keystone of the arch without the uplifting columns. The fact should be made glorious without losing its precision. Feeling should be made solid without losing its wingedness.

All thought about ourselves which does not lead to action is waste and weakness.

Of the great men of the last half century Gladstone most worthily unites the two elements. He was a master of the fact. His budgets as chancellor of the exchequer were models of large and exact exposition. He was also a master of emotions. His messages to his followers were battle cries, and not a few of his orations were inspiring poems.

Kismet

By Jane McLean

GOD made her fair to some, her golden hair
Piled high above a brow unfurrowed, white;
Her eyes blue lambent pools of color, where
The fires of life leap with a steady light.
And some who feel her shadow do but see
The tragic clasping of her pale white hands,
The weaving of her web of destiny
That pulls the universe at her demands.
And whether she is friend or foe to man,
Yielding him joy or sorrow, love or hate,
He spends a lifetime since the world began
Striving to read the misty eyes of Fate.

In-Shoots

A little wine for the stomach's sake sometimes causes a blush on the nose without doing the stomach much good.

Notwithstanding she knows that he is a little scallawag, every mother believes that her son will be great some time.

In the ears of the modern girl the serenade of the auto horn beats the themes of all composers.

When a man has such a mean disposition that he cannot be jollied he is a hopeless case.
